400 Extra Police On Duty; Midnight Drinking Curfew Will Be Enforced

Washington will hoist its glass tonight to celebrate the birth of a new half-century.

Merrymaking in public will be under the vigilant eye of almost twice as many policemen as turn out on a normal Saturday night. Otherwise, much of the gaiety probably will be confined to the fireside. Special midnight masses and services have been scheduled by many churches.

Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett said yesterday that 1000 uniformed and plainclothes officers will be on duty—about 400 more than usual.

Many to Report Early

The size of extra details will be determined by precinct captains, Major Barrett said. They will call in extra personnel from regular day shifts, and men who normally report for duty at midnight will come in at 11 p. m.

Concentration of the force will be in downtown districts, with particular emphasis on Precinct Nos. 1, 2, 8, 10 and 13.

Aside from everyday law enforcement, police have been reminded of District regulations that require all alcoholic potions to be clear of restaurant and night club tables by midnight.

"We want to issue a special warning to those who want to drink to leave their cars at home," Major Barrett said.

He added that vice squad officers will keep an eye on after-hours "bottle" clubs to see that only members and their registered guests are served within the law, which prohibits the sale of drinks.

Advertisements for the buffet supper and dance at the National Guard Armory, where Gene Krupa's band will play tonight, were revised yesterday to exclude the offer of "set-ups" for patrons wishing to bring their own bottles.

Major Barrett said managers of the dance were advised it is unlawful to drink on Armory premises. He said a detail of police will be assigned to the function.

Caterers said there will be soft drinks served, but "no ice and no soda water."

Boom in Retail Stores

Several of the larger retail liquor dealers last night attributed a sudden rush for bottled goods to the fact that more home parties will be held than in the past.

One dealer said business after 5 p. m. yesterday was 25 percent heavier than for the same day last year.

Government agencies, banks and most business concerns in the District are observing the same three-day holiday schedule they did a week ago, closing yesterday and reopening Tuesday morning.

This extension of free time in many cases will be added to the Christmas holiday and several days annual leave to constitute a vacation for many Federal employes.

Officials at Union Station said early last night that evidence of the long weekend holiday was already apparent.

Eight extra trains were added to normal schedules yesterday. All

Bidault Captures Confidence Tests By 18-Vote Margin

Paris, Dec. 30 (U.P.).—Premier Georges Bidault weathered two votes of confidence in the French National Assembly with unexpected ease today in the second major showdown on the record 1950 budget.

In two successive votes on budget articles calling for increased taxes, the Assembly gave the head of the two-month-old coalition government an 18-vote margin. The first vote was 305 to 287, the second 306 to 288. The budget calls for an outlay of six and a half billion dollars.

Goffstown, N. H., Dec. 30 (AP).—A physician accused of murder in an admitted "mercy killing" of a suffering cancer-ridden patient was freed today under $25,000 bonds.

Dr. Hermann N. Sander emerged smiling from the Hillsboro County Courthouse to tell newsmen he hoped to get back to his general practice right away, as prosecutors prepared to present the case to the grand jury, perhaps Tuesday.

The 40-year-old doctor—a former Dartmouth ski champion—is charged with killing Mrs. Abbie Barroto, 59, of Manchester, by injecting 10 cubic centimeters of air into her veins with a syringe December 4.

Friends rallied to his support and the dead woman's husband—Reginald F. Barroto, an oil salesman—handed reporters a statement:

"I think Dr. Sander is a wonderful man. I cannot believe he is in any way to be blamed for my wife's passing. He has my complete confidence."

Taft Rebuffs Plan for Party Policy Board

By Jack Steele
NYHT News Service

Guy C. Gabrielson, Republican national chairman, has asked the party's congressional leaders to get busy next week drafting a proposed new statement of party policy for the 1950 campaign, it was learned yesterday.

These congressional chiefs, it was also learned, are decidedly luke-warm toward the project and have given the national chairman's request cool reception. Indications are, however, that they may eventually cooperate in preparing a broad statement of party principles.

Gabrielson made his request to Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Commttee, and Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, minority floor leader. He asked them to appoint special committees of nine from the Senate and House to do the spade-work.

Taft disclosed he had refused to name such a committee and had informed Gabrielson he was flatly opposed to the whole idea of drafting a new statement of party policy at this time.

He added, however, that he would put the matter up to a conference of all Republican Senators called for Tuesday and let them decide whether to go along with

First VA Dividend Checks Will Enter Mails January 16

The Veterans Administration will start paying its $2,600,000,000 special insurance dividend January 16.

The agency said yesterday the first of sixteen million checks will go out on that date.

It said the mailing will be done by the United States Treasury disbursing office.

The goal is to mail 200,000 checks a day or one million a week. VA said this is "merely a goal," and does not imply that 200,000 checks will go out every workday.

A spokesman said the decision to announce the January 16 date was reached after "someone over in Treasury apparently leaked the news to the press."

VA said it has received 14,225,000 dividend applications and has acknowledged almost all of them.

Of the acknowledgments, 25,000 have been returned to VA because the veterans moved and failed to provide postoffices with a forwarding address.

The Treasury is going to make a test run next week to see how fast it can turn out checks for the dividend payments.

Reds in China Recognized By New Delhi

New Delhi, India, Dec. 30. (U.P.) India, bowing to "realities," today became the first British Commonwealth nation to recognize Communist China.

An official statement said the Indian government, as the upshot of negotiations begun in October, "have intimated to the new government of China their willingness to establish diplomatic relations."

The announcement completely ignored the Chinese Nationalists, whose government has been forced to retreat to the island of Formosa. Nationalist China, however, promptly broke relations with India.

India was the second non-Communist nation to recognize Red China, following the example set by Burma two weeks ago. Mao's regime previously had been recognized by Russia, the Soviet satellite nations and Yugoslavia.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said the Indian action "needs no explanation."

He said India believes the Communist regime in China deserves recognition because it controls most of China, is ready to honor international obligations, and is supported by a majority of the Chinese people.

"Realities cannot be ignored," the spokesman said.

British Recognition of Reds Expected Within 10 Days

London, Dec. 30 (AP).—Britain is expected to recognize the Chinese Communist government within 10 days, following the lead of India and Burma.

Several other Commonwealth nations, such as Pakistan, Ceylon, New Zealand and Canada, probably will follow suit later in January, after the end of the Colombo (Ceylon) conference of Commonwealth Foreign Ministers beginning January 9.

Warm New Year To Follow Today's Cold Weather

Smoky-breath weather is scheduled to arrive today with a low of 26 in the city and 20 in the suburbs in early hours, according to The Man at the Weather Bureau.

He said the temperatures will skid considerably from the high of 42 set yesterday, but added he expects Washington to warm up by New Year's Day, with increasing cloudiness then. No rain or snow is in sight.

Today will be "fair" he said, and the mercury will climb gradually through the next two days. Relative humidity reached an exceptionally low point yesterday, 23 percent at 2 p. m.

Joint Chiefs Go to Pacific In February

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The Joint Chiefs of Staff will go to Hawaii and Japan in February to inspect American defenses there, the Defense Department announced yesterday.

In Japan they will have their first opportunity as a group to talk to General Douglas MacArthur, who has let it be known that he is increasingly concerned over the Communist triumphs in China.

The Joint Chiefs have no plans to visit Korea or Formosa.

The announcement of their coming Pacific journey was the second in two days suggesting, on the eve of the reassembling of Congress, that the United States was "doing something" about its position in Asia.

On Thursday the Navy Department said it was about to send an aircraft carrier and two destroyers to reinforce the Seventh Task Fleet based on the Philippines. The Navy said this move had been decided weeks ago.

Yesterday the Defense Department followed the same technique in announcing the Joint Chiefs' visit. It said that the Pacific trip had been planned for "several months," but that February was the earliest date when all four military leaders could go together.

Those who will go are Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman; Gen. J. Lawton Collins, chief of staff of the Army; Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, chief of naval operations, and Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, chief of staff of the Air Force.

The Defense Department also said that their coming trip would be another part of the world-wide inspections which previously took them to Germany, Austria and Alaska.

Their presence in Japan will coincide with the meeting of American diplomats from all over southeastern Asia scheduled for Bangkok, Siam, in February. Ambassador Philip C. Jessup is now on his way to this meeting via Japan, Korea and probably Formosa, with instructions to survey

Taft Would Send Navy To Formosa if Needed

Dayton, Ohio, Dec. 30 (AP).—Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) tonight was quoted in the Journal Herald as saying Formosa should be kept out of the hands of Chinese Communists even if it is necessary to send the United States Navy there to protect it.

Austrian Exhibit Attendance Tops Half Million Mark

Attendance at the exhibit of Vienna art treasures, loaned by the Austrian government to the National Gallery here, went over the half million mark yesterday. With 22,837 persons passing through the gallery, the total reached 522,065 who have viewed the display.

The display will be open today from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m., regular gallery hours, and the same on Monday. On Sunday, because of New Year's Day, the building will be closed.

Closing date of the exhibit is January 22.

700 Firings Here Add to Economy Toll

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Defense officials said yesterday that a speedup and expansion of the military economy program have resulted in the abolition of 700 more civilian jobs here than was planned last August.

Worldwide, Defense Secretary Louis Johnson's firing program has "gone over the top" by 15,000 job reductions. The total dropped, as of December 1, was just short of 140,000—or 5000 more than planned orginally—with 10,600 scheduled position cuts still to come.

Officials said they hope to net an additional 100 million dollars savings from the enlargment of the economy plan—perhaps 30 million dollars this year and 70 million in fiscal 1951.

Estimates of Savings

Last August the Department of Defense estimated that 200 million dollars could be saved this year and 500 million next year by cutting civil rolls of the Army, Navy and Air Force from 906,700 to about 771,000, and other economies then announced.

Taking stock of the situation with the program at the year end all but complete, Army, Navy and Air Force chiefs concluded that while it will bring some lessening of the Nation's military readiness, the cuts have not really hurt.

Chief effect has been to lower our "mobilization potential" or ability to expand in an emergency. The closing of air bases, training camps and navy yards, as well as a curtailment in maintenance, overhaul and modernization of weapons and equipment will mean that it will take longer to mobilize and get ready if war comes.

There is considerable difference of opinion as to the effect of some of the other defense cuts—particularly the reductions in Army, Navy and Air Force operating forces. Many military men consider them inadvisable.

But they are generally in agreement that the loss in readiness resulting from the civilian personnel cuts and closing of bases is more than offset by the stabilizing effects on the national economy. We can spend ourselves to defeat in the cold war, they realize.

Target Overshot

A survey of the savings program showed yesterday that as of December 1 the Army had eliminated 56,000 civilian jobs under the August program—15,000 more than its target. Apparently this was not planned but resulted from the operation of the "freeze" on new appointments.

As of the same date, the Air

Jordan Annexes Arab Palestine, Cairo Agency Says

Cairo, Dec. 30 (AP)—The Arab news agency today said King Abdullah of Hashemite Jordan has formally incorporated Jordan-occupied Palestine into his kingdom.

Abdullah's forces command almost all of Arab Palestine, including the old walled city of Jerusalem. Both Jordan and Israel oppose a United Nations decision to place Jerusalem under international control.

Egypt holds the Gaza strip on the Mediterranean. A sliver of Arab Palestine is in Syrian hands.

Doctor, Now 83, Delivered 3 Infants at Turn of Century

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Twenty-two infants were born with the twentieth century in Washington 50 years ago, but because of incomplete city records no trace of them exists today.

But three of the babies were delivered by the same doctor, working in a dimly lit operating room assisted only by one "red bandana nurse," an ether cone, chloroform, and basins of soapy water.

Traces of this doctor's activity are scattered liberally through a half century of Washington medicine.

He is Dr. William A. Warfield, 1522 R st. nw., a retired gynecologist of 83, who worked as a tobacco farmer, bellman, waiter and unsalaried interne before he started 35 years as superintendent and chief surgeon of Freedmens Hospital.

Dr. Warfield left the hospital at 70 and completed eight years of private practice before he retired for good in 1944, after 50 years in medicine.

Fading Bureau of Vital Statistics records list Dr. Warfield as the attending physician January 1, 1900, in the accouchements of Mrs. Clara Dorcas Hill, Mrs. Annie Short Guttrick, and Mrs. Lulu Lucas Williams.

The bureau's records at the turn of the century failed to include the Increase in Corporate Taxes, Excise Cut Favored by Lucas

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

An increase in corporate tax rates to recover any revenue lost from projected cuts in Federal excise taxes, was suggested yesterday by Senate Administration Leader Scott W. Lucas.

In a press conference preview of the new session of Congress convening Tuesday, Lucas said he favored cuts in wartime excises only if more revenue could be found elsewhere.

"I believe Congress would vote to pick up the loss," Lucas told the press confernce.

"Would you raise individual income taxes?" a reporter asked.

"No," said Lucas, "we would probably increase corporation taxes.

"I think that could be done without too much strain on the corporations of the country, despite their opinions to the contrary."

Lucas predicted another year's extension of Federal rent controls, passage of a "strong" Social Security expansion law and a major

Truman to Put No Surprises In His Message

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman's State of the Union message, which he will deliver in person before a joint session of Congress at 1 p. m. Wednesday, will deal with fiscal policy "only in broad strokes."

His detailed program of tax recommendations will go to Capitol Hill later.

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross made this announcement yesterday after Mr. Truman had read his message to members of the Cabinet and had then gone over it with them line by line.

There have been indications that the President will recommend reduction or elimination of wartime excise taxes, such as those on jewelry, furs, luggage, pocketbooks, railroad tickets and theater admissions.

If he should make such a recommendation, it is considered likely that he would ask Congress at the same time to make up for the loss of revenue by increasing taxes on corporations, estates and gifts.

Press Secretary Ross said that the State of the Union message was given a "very good going over"

Uranium Ore Lode Found in Michigan; Extent Unknown

Negaunee, Mich., Dec. 30 (AP).—Discovery of uranium ore, raw material of atomic energy, in Michigan's rugged north woods was revealed today.

Its importance has not yet been determined.

One of the Nation's largest steel corporations will begin exploring the lode next spring to find out.

The deposit was found last August by an employe of Jones & Laughlin Ore Co., a subsidiary of the steel corporation by the same name.

Derailer Sentenced To Die in Electric Chair

Norristown, Pa., Dec. 30 (AP)—A 36-year-old itinerant farm laborer from Pocomoke City, Md., was sentenced today to die in the electric chair for murder in the derailment of a Reading Co. train.

James Morris Johnson received the sentence without emotion. Two trainmen, both of Allentown, were killed in the derailment at Valley Forge, May 9, 1948. Some 20 passengers were injured.

Farm Prices Under Parity In 8-Yr. Low

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The gravy train American farmers have been riding for eight years has collapsed, the year-end agricultural price report of the Agriculture Department indicated yesterday.

The break in farm prices that began last January has continued until on December 15 farm prices went below parity for the first time since November, 1941.

Farm parity is an average price for farm products equal to the price the farmer must pay for the manufactured goods he buys.

On December 15, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported, the farmers were getting 98 percent of parity. In other words, they were getting only 98 cents on

New Television Sets Give Bigger Pictures Cheaper

Bigger pictures for less money will be the theme of the 1950 RCA television line.

At a premier showing of the new models at Southern Wholesalers, Inc., 707 Edgewood st. ne., dealers saw a 16-inch table model offered at a suggested list price of $299.95.

The figure is $95 less than the lowest-priced RCA 16-inch table set previously on the market.

Other models shown included a 10-inch table model at $169.95, $30 less than the previous lowest-priced 10-inch set; and a 12½-inch TV combination console with AM and FM and a three-speed phonograph for $439.50, about $45 less than present comparable models.

Yugoslavs Deride Terrorist Efforts To Unseat Tito

Belgrade, Dec. 30 (AP).—Yugoslavia today declared Bulgaria and Albania are sending terrorists into this country in an effort to unseat Marshal Tito's independent Communist regime, but insisted they're wasting their time.

Information Minister Vladimir Dedijer said Bulgaria had sent three men across the border to commit sabotage. He said they were captured within a day and will be turned over to militiamen for trial.

"Let them send as many as they like," Dedijer said. "We will guarantee they will be taken by the people within 24 hours."

Dedijer said Albania has been using similar methods in an effort to overthrow Tito—a campaign on which the Cominform has been engaged unsuccessfully for 18 months.

Committee Votes to Put Off Sesqui Fair Till '51

Full Commission Expected to Agree; Other Events to Go On as Scheduled

By Chalmers Roberts
Post Reporter

Postponement of the Sesquicentennial Freedom Fair until the spring of 1951 was recommended yesterday by the Sesqui Commission's executive committee.

Acceptance of the recommendation when the full National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission meets, probably next week, is a foregone conclusion.

The other phases of the celebration to mark Washington's 150th anniversary as the National Capital will go on as scheduled. These include the symphonic drama in the new Rock Creek Park amphitheater, art exhibits and numerous ceremonials commemorating historic events whose sesquicentennial anniversary falls in 1950.

The Freedom Fair probably will open April 15, 1951, and run until fall, then reopen for a second season in 1952.

The executive committee also called for a new deal in handling the Sesqui's affairs with full publicity of all agreements, past and future.

Three-Hour Session

At the end of a three-hour meeting in the Riggs National Bank board room, the executive committee's chairman, Joseph C. McGarraghy, issued two statements. One concerned the postponement and the other washed the commission's hand of the Paul Alexander affair, involving an alleged kick-back proposal by a man who is a stockholder in the Sesqui's leasing bureau.

The postponement statement said:

"Since the date of the appropriation for the Sesquicentennial making the Freedom Fair a possibility, every consideration has been given to meeting a time schedule which would assure opening the fair on July 4, 1950.

"Notwithstanding these efforts, delays have been encountered which make it impossible to complete the fair on schedule and the executive committee will refer to the commission the question of postponing opening of the Freedom Fair until the spring of 1951.

"The committee also will recommend an organization and procedure to govern award of contracts and operation of the fair.

Activities Curtailed

"In the meantime, instructions have been issued for the temporary curtailment of activities in connection with the Freedom Fair and review of existing commitments. Upon completion of this review, all the transactions will be made public, it being the opinion of the executive committee that all of these matters should be made public.

"Plan A of the Sesquicentennial program will be executed as orig-

U. S. Girls Cleared In Double Murder In Afghanistan

Two American girls working in the embassy in far-off Kabul, Afghanistan, have been cleared of any connection with the murder of two Afghans there.

This word reached the State Department from Kabul shortly before the Moscow radio broadcast a story seeking to implicate the girls in the double crime.

The bodies of the two victims were found in a well shaft outside the house where the American girls were living. "After an investigation the Afghan authorities are satisfied," the State Department said, "that the clerks are in no way implicated."

The girls are Miss Marilyn Rothfus, 24, a clerk, of Buffalo, N. Y., and Miss Betty Johnson, an accountant, of Brockway, Mont.

Teeth Have Natural Guardian Against Decay, Scientists Say

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

New York, Dec. 30.—Teeth are filled with protein plugs which protect them against decay, the American Association for the Advancement of Science was told today.

Unexplained softening of the plugs precedes bacterial invasion and subsequent tooth decay, advancing a new concept that decay starts from within, Drs. Reidar F. Sognnaes and George B. Wislocki of the Harvard School of Dental Medicine, Boston, reported.

The hairline plugs, whose channels extend from the tooth surface downward through the pulp, were found in microscopic studies of tooth structure by special staining processes. They said chemists identified the hitherto unsuspected chemical constituent as acid mucopolysaccharide, a sugar-containing protein.

Destruction of the hair-like plugs, apparently from within, precedes bacterial invasion and subsequent tooth decay, they reported. Such destruction consists of a change in the jelly-like consistency of the protein plugs to a liquid state, but just where and how the process starts has not been determined.

Chest Campaign Falls Short Of Drive, Netting $3,557,731

The 1950 Community Chest Campaign ended yesterday, more than 10 percent short of the $3,991,719 goal.

At a report luncheon in the Washington Hotel, workers brought in 2982 new pledges, for $31,435, to make the total pledged in the drive $3,557,731.78 or 89.13 percent of the goal.

Chauncey Parker, president of the Community Chest Federation for the National Capital Area, pointed out that since the Community Chest was first organized in Washington in 1929, more than $57,300,000 has been donated in gifts "to meet the basic health and welfare needs of the community."

[Last year the drive raised a total of $3,379,194, 76 percent of the 1948 goal by the campaign. Later contributions boosted the total.]

Parker emphasized that while the formal campaign has ended, the door is still open for contributions to the Community Chest. Campaign officials indicated some firms which had not completed solicitation might make another try for 100 percent participation after January 2.

The luncheon, last formal event of the campaign, was highlighted by presentation to Frank J. Lu[illegible], general campaign chairman, of

90 Congressmen Have Kin on Payroll

Fights Grundy

Duff Enters GOP Senate Race in Pa.

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 30 (U.P.)—Gov. James H. Duff today announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for United States Senator—a decision expected to touch off one of the GOP's stiffest primary fights in Pennsylvania history. The seat now is held by Francis J. Myers (D.).

Duff's entry precipitated an open fight with Representative John Crain Qunkel, Harrisburg, the first avowed candidate for the nomination.

His statement fired a shot at the conservative "old guard" element of the GOP headed by former United States Senator Joseph R. Grundy, Bristol, Pa.

The Governor said that Republicans should be given a "clear choice" on whether they want a forward-looking program or a "policy of reaction."

"In my opinion, the time is ripe for a decision as to what the party really stands for," Duff said.

He also scotched hopes of a compromise with Grundy forces.

"I would not want to be on a ticket with those who do not have a common conviction on these matters," Duff said.

State capitol sources, and even Duff himself, have indicated strongly that they believe Kunkel will get, if he hasn't already won it, the support of Grundy who is the Governor's arch political foe.

Duff and Senator Edward Martin (R.) split at the 1948 national convention when Martin swung over to the support of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York for the presidential nomination. They still are at odds politically.

Truman to Use Broad Strokes

when Mr. Truman met with his Cabinet officers. All were present except Secretary of Defense Johnson and Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, who were out of town. Undersecretary Stephen T. Early represented Johnson, and Assistant Secretary Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney represented Sawyer.

Ross said that the Cabinet members apparently receivel the message with hearty approval.

"I think I can say for them that they regard it as an excellent message," he said. "They seemed to regard it as a very good statement of democratic principles, with both a big D and a little d."

He said it was not an assault on Congress and not a campaign document. He said further that it would call for action on the remainder of the Fair Deal program, and would contain no "surprises."

Some of the Fair Deal proposals hanging over from the first session of the Eighty-first Congress are repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, the Brannan farm plan, compulsory health insurance, Federal aid to education and the explosive civil rights program.

Press Secretary Ross was asked if Mr. Truman's message on Wednesday would contain any tax proposals.

"The fiscal situation," he said, "is dealt with only in general terms. Tax recommendations will come along later. The President's fiscal policy will be spelled out in detail later. The message paints it only in broad strokes."

Asked whether the tax recommendations would be included in the President's subsequent economic report or budget message, he replied, "Not necessarily."

This suggested the possibility of a separate message to Congress on the tax program.

D. C. Is Ready For New Year

regular runs carried additional passenger cars.

No added trains were prepared for today and Sunday, but Monday and early Tuesday will be excessively heavy traffic days.

Fifteen extra trains have been added on northbound roads Monday, many carrying passengers back to New York from their holiday in Washington. Inbound from the north will be 16 extra trains, while five have been scheduled to run south that day.

"The passenger load for this weekend will be just as heavy as it was for Christmas," one official predicted.

This will be due to the return of members of Congress and Capitol Hill employes as well as Government workers and other District residents who went away for the holiday.

Airlines spokesmen said most outgoing flights were filling up steadily, but that addition of extra flights would be more likely on Monday and Tuesday.

While the District prepared to use its ingenuity for continuing any "wet" celebration after midnight, a protest was lodged by a Maryland Protestant church association against Baltimore drinking hours.

Legally Baltimore bars can stay open from 6 a. m. Saturday until 1 a. m. Monday—43 straight hours.

The Rev. Dr. J. Frank Byam, executive secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance representing 1500 Maryland Protestant churches, said he deplored the fact taverns should have "preferential rights over other legitimate business."

Sunday drinking "is a sad thing for the Christian people of Maryland to contemplate," he added.

By the United Press

An examination of the House of Representatives payroll showed yesterday that about 90 of the 435 members have relatives on it.

Senate payroll records are not now open for public inspection but several Senators also are known to have relatives working for them.

Hiring of the relatives is perfectly legal. There have been many notables instances in which a wife or other family members has been an important aide to a member of Congress.

John Nance Garner was ably assisted by his wife when he was Vice President and Speaker of the House. So was the late Homer T. Rainey when he was Speaker. President Truman had his wife on the payroll when he was a Senator.

A check showed that most of the relatives have definite jobs to do.

Variations in Work

Some of them put in long hours and carry heavy loads for their bosses. Some work a few hours a week. Some rarely appear at the office but some do typing, speechwriting and research at home.

The November records for the House showed that nine Congressmen had two relatives each on the payroll and that one member—Representative Norris Poulson (R., Calif.)—had three daughters on the list.

It is illegal, however, to take a kickback from any employe—the charge on which Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) went to jail recently. The charge against Thomas. However, was based on kickbacks from other employes and not from members of his family.

Thomas' wife, Amelia, was listed for $452.41 on the November payroll and his sister-in-law, Lillian M. Thomas, was listed for $101.66.

Representative Usher L. Burdick (R., N. D.) has announced he will ask the coming session of Congress to investigate whether there are other kickback cases.

Members of Congress usually are reluctant to investigate their fellow members, however, and unless Burdick gets more support than indicated so far an investigation is unlikely.

Doesn't Hire Employes

Burdick said he doesn't hire relatives because he doesn't think it a good idea.

Members of Congress now get an annual salary of $12,500, plus a tax free expense allowance of $2500 and additional allowances for telephone, telegraph and stationery.

Each Congressman also is allowed a maximum of about $20,000 a year to hire office help. The only restraint on that fund is that no one employe can be paid more than $7700 a year.

There are reports that some members have put people on the payroll who are not relatives and who do not work in the offices.

effort to enact FEPC legislation during the session ahead.

At the same time, he practically washed out any prospect of enacting other Fair Deal measures during the next session at least—Taft-Hartley repeal, compulsory health insurance and the Brannan plan.

He "seriously doubted" any attempt would be made to repeal the labor law. When asked about the Brannan plan, he said last session's new farm law should be "tried out for a while." As for compulsory health insurance, he said that would be seriously considered in committee "but I doubt any legislation will be passed this session."

Policymakers to Meet

Lucas, meanwhile, called Senate Democratic policymakers to meet at 12:30 p. m. Monday to schedule opening round business, and summoned a follow-up meeting of his Democratic Steering Committee for the following day.

On Tuesday morning "Big Four" Democratic leaders of the House and Senate will confer at the White House with Mr. Truman and probably get their first peak at the State of the Union message he will personally deliver to a joint session of Congress the following day.

Senate Republicans set aside Tuesday to frame strategy for the session. The Senate GOP policy committee will meet Tuesday morning at 10 a. m. and at 3 p. m. there will be a general caucus of Senate Republicans.

Lucas, meanwhile, let slip a clew to the importance the Administration leadership places on social and tax law revision this session.

Strengthen Committee Control

He disclosed that the Democratic steering committee will be asked to increase the Democratic control ratio on the key Senate Finance Committee from 7 to 6 to 8 to 5.

That would permit the assignment of an additional Senate Democrat to the group that handles Social Security and tax measures, and force the retirement of one Republican member.

Defeat of Senator John Foster Dulles (R., N.Y.) by former Gov. Herbert H. Lehman entitles Democrats to an increase in representation on one major committee, Lucas said.

When Dulles was originally appointed to succeed former Democratic Senator Robert F. Wagner, Democratic control of the Rules Committee was cut back from 8 to 5 to 7 to 6, he pointed out.

Leave Rules Group As It Is

Instead of restoring the Rules Group to an 8-to-5 ratio, Lucas said he will recommend that the Democrats be given a 3-vote edge on the Finance Committee for the first time.

Lucas disclosed the Senate will hop off to a quick start this session by opening debate on its No. 1 bill, repeal of the Federal oleomargerine tax, immediately after the President reads his message on Wednesday. A dairy bloc filibuster is in prospect, but Lucas said he has a feeling it won't last long.

The Democratic leader said he will move to call up the fair employment practices bill "at the proper time" but hedged his forecast on whether the bill would pass.

He said that will all depend on how the new coalition cloture rule works. It requires 64 Senate votes to stop a filibuster.

"If Mr. Wherry (Senate Republican leader) can furnish those 35 Republican votes he is always talking about, we can pass the bill," said Lucas.

For Bipartisan Foreign Policy

Terming bipartisan foreign policy "the most potent force for peace in the world today," Lucas congratulated Senators Vandenberg (R., Mich.), Morse (R., Oreg.) and Connally (D., Tex.) for their appeals for continuation of two-party foreign unity.

He said he favored "the maximum amount of consultation and cooperation between the executive and legislative branches" to strengthen foreign policy unity.

In the domestic field, Lucas was the first Senate spokesman to speak out for another year extension of Federal rent controls. Said Lucas: "If we don't continue rent controls it may start off another round of demands for higher wages, and another inflationary spiral."

Broadcasts Speech

Lucas covered much of the same ground in a speech he later broadcast over an NBC network.

In addition to rent control extension, he predicted passage of a housing bill "for the people in the middle income brackets who are not eligible for public projects and have watched the other housing units soar beyond their reach."

He plugged for the Senate-passed Federal-aid-to-education bill now stalled by a House religious controversy. Lucas said the bill "proved satisfactory to Senators of all faiths."

And he predicted Congress will "liberalize the displaced persons law . . . to remove provisions regarded as discriminatory by many groups in our country."

Aid for Taxpayers

Three representatives of the Internal Revenue Bureau will aid Arlington taxpayers in preparing their 1949 estimated Federal returns, by consulting with all comers in the courthouse headquarters of Arlington Revenue Commissioner Harry K. Green, January 3 through January 20.

Farm Prices Dip Below Parity First Time Since Nov. 1941

a dollar for their products compared with labor and industry.

The Agriculture Department took prompt action. It prepared orders reducing the acreage for corn and rice for next year to reduce those crops. It also announced a buying program for eggs, considerably below this year, to go into effect early next month. Under this program, dried eggs will be bought from processors at an average of 37 cents a dozen.

Minimum Buying Prices

In turn, the processors must certify that they have paid at least 25 cents a dozen for the eggs at the farm or 27 cents delivered to the processing plants. This year the farmers were guaranteed 35 cents at the farm and 37 cents at the plants, and processors were paid on an average of 45 cents.

Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan announced that corn acreage would be cut more than 11 million acres from this year's commercial corn acreage of 57 million. The cut will mean a reduction of about 20 percent in the commercial corn acreage and about 13 percent in the national corn acreage. This year the total corn acreage was about 88 million.

The acreage cut, which individual farmers must meet to benefit by price supports which next year will be 90 percent of parity, includes many areas in Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland not hertofore producing sufficient corn to be listed as commercial areas. These include the following counties:

12 in Virginia

VIRGINIA: Accomac, Clarke, Fauquier, Loudoun, Isle of Wight, Nansemond, Norfolk, Northampton, Prince William,, Princess Anne, Southampton and Surry.

MARYLAND: Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Caroline, Carroll, Cecil, Frederick, Harford, Howard, Kent, Montgomery, Queen Anne, Somerset, Talbot, Washington, Wicomico and Worcester.

WEST VIRGINIA: Berkeley and Jefferson.

This is the first cut in corn acreage allotments since 1942. At that time only about 400 counties were in the commercial corn area. The new order raises this number of 837. To be included in the commercial area, a county must produce an average of four bushels of corn for each acre of farm land.

To Insure Supplies

"The 1950 allotment is set at a level to insure continued corn supplies," Brannan said in his order. "It is now estimated that the corn carryover on October 1, 1950, will be about 927 million bushels, an all-time record. The carryover this year was a record 815 million bushels, and the previous high was 688 million in 1941."

No marketing quotas were announced for either rice or corn. The rice acreage was ordered cut from 1,845,000 acres to 1,593,000—about 14 percent. The present carryover (surplus) of rice is estimated at about 13 million bushels, or four times the carryover for the 1945-47 period.

The report showed that a year ago farmers paid $2.46 for goods that in 1910-14 cost $1. On last December 15 this had gone down to $2.40.

At the same time, however, farmers' income dropped from $2.68 for their products compared with $1 in 1910-14, to $2.36 this month. In other words, while the cost of things farmers buy has gone down during the year, the prices they received for their products went down still more.

Taft Rebuffs Board Plan

the project and, if so, to name the committee.

A half-dozen other Senators indicated privately that they were also unenthusiastic about preparing a policy statement at this time, but said they might go along because of rank-and-file demands for a new party program.

Martin said he had informed Gabrielson he would consult with other House Republicans early next week before naming such a policy committee and proceeding with the policy-drafting plan.

Although less critical of the project than Taft, he made it clear he did not expect House Republicans to greet the idea with great favor.

Taft noted that any such overall statement would probably have to be very broad and general, and that Republican members of Congress and candidates would have to take more definite stands on many issues before next November.

"I don't think it would help any Republican candidate next fall. Certainly it won't do me any good in Ohio," he said.

War Assets Administration Ends Career Officially Today

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

War Assets Administration, which disposed of nearly 27 billion dollars of surplus property in 3½ years, will officially go out of business today.

The order abolishing WAA was issued yesterday by General Services Administrator Jess Larson.

Larson also announced that Rear Admiral Paul L. Mather, former WAA Administrator and liquidator of war assets since last July, had resigned because of "urgent personal reasons." Larson said he had "reluctantly" accepted Mather's resignation effective January 7.

While WAA, since its organization March 25, 1946, has disposed of virtually all the 27.2 billion dollars worth of surplus left over from the war, property which cost $83,477,000 remains unsold. The job of trying to dispose of this will be taken over by General Services Administration.

Tough Task for GSA

A survey of this property leaves the impression that GSA's task will be no easy one. These leftovers include 65 real estate and industrial properties, of which some 15 are former Army installations. The remaining 50 include many highly complex industrial plants which, for one reason or another, have not yet found buyers and appear to offer little attraction under present conditions.

There is for example, a coke plant at Tacoma, Wash., which is too far from a supply of coking coal to make it profitable for commercial operation. And there is a power line in New York State designed to feed a plant which has no further need for the power.

Probably the greatest white elephant on the hands of GSA is the 80-acre Dodge plant at Chicago which was taken back when Preston Tucker failed to make a succes of his new model automobile. It is the world's largest single industrial installation.

During WAA's short life, it realized some 30 percent of the actual cost of the surplus materials it sold. However, much property was given to municipalities, schools and the like, so the $4,192,000,000 WAA received in cash represents actually about 15 percent of the original value of the property.

8 More Producer Groups Attack UMW

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Eight soft coal producers associations yesterday followed the example of the Southern operators and charged John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers with violating the Taft-Hartley Act.

The charges of unfair practices were filed here with the National Labor Relations Board by a group of Northern and Midwestern producers, who asked for immediate relief by way of a court injunction.

NLRB General Counsel Robert N. Denhan announced he was referring the set of charges, along with those made by the Southern Producers Association on Wednesday, to John A. Penello, Baltimore regional director, for investigation.

Should Penello find merit in the accusation, he will draw up a formal complaint against the United Mine Workers. Upon receiving the complaint, Denham has the discretionary power of seeking a temporary injunction against Lewis and the union. Such an injunction might order the miners to bargain in good faith, to desist from illegal activities, to end the three-day work week.

At the Baltimore regional office it was said that the petitions would in all likelihood be combined, and that working at top speed, the office might be able to reject or formalize the complaints in 10 days to two weeks.

The associations include operators in Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, Indiana and Ohio, and represent around 111 million tons of soft coal production annually. The Southern Producers dig an equal amount of coal. Altogether one third of the industry is seeking legal action against John L.

The United Mine Workers, meanwhile, announced that independent operators turning out 18 million tons of coal a year have signed a new contract providing a 95-cent-a-day increase in wages, and 15-cent-a-ton increase in welfare fund royalties. These operators are permitted to operate on a five-day week; nonsigning companies can only work three days a week—an action declared illegally coercive in the NLRB suits.

Indiana Reports Shortage

Meanwhile, Thomas R. Hutson, Indiana State Labor Commissioner, appealed to Washington officials yesterday for help in relieving what he said was a coal shortage in his State. In Cincinnati, an official of the coal and merchants association declared that a week of normal winter weather would exhaust the city's retail coal supply for domestic consumers.

In New York, anthracite contract negotiations were recessed until Tuesday without any break in the deadlock.

State troopers yesterday prevented some 15 pickets from halting the entry of coal trucks into the Colfax power station of the Duquesne Light Co. near Pittsburgh. Coal pickets have made sporadit attempts of limit coal hauling to the miners' three-day work week.

By Capt. Crommelin

MacArthur, King Quoted On Unity Step

San Francisco, Dec. 30 (AP).—Navy Capt. John G. Crommelin today quoted letters he said were written by Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Admiral Ernest King, to support his continuing criticism of armed-service unification.

Crommelin, 47, now is air officer on the staff of Vice Admiral George D. Murray, commander of the Western Sea Frontier. He was transferred here recently from duty with the Joint Chiefs of Staff after he precipitated a Congressional hearing of the unification dispute.

The letter which Crommelin said MacArthur, then Army Chief of Staff, wrote February 18, 1932, to the late Maj. Gen. Charles H. Martin, then a Democratic Congressman from Oregon, said:

"Formation of the organization ["unification, I take it"—Crommelin] proposed would not materially lessen the necessity for the separate logistical, administrative and training staffs now existing, but would at once attract to itself a group of officers, civil officials, clerks and others which would probably exceed in cost and size during the course of time anything that this Nation has ever experienced.

"Parasitical Development"

"The history of Government demonstrates that the parasitical development of bureaucracy springs from the setting up of superfluous echelons of control such as the one proposed.

"The super cabinet officer at its head could not fail to be the acquisitor of one of the largest and undoubtedly the most powerful governmental organizations the United States has ever known.

Crommelin said the communication by former Fleet Admiral King, now retired, was in a memorandum to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, dated October 15, 1945, expressing his views on the reorganization of the national defense establishment. It said in part:

"The Army and Navy are today huge organizations. Each has had complex administrative problems occasioned solely by size . . . I do not see how it can be argued, seriously, that those problems will be simplified if the two departments are merged.

"I apprehend that with such an organization as proposed, sea power will not be accorded adequate recognition, because the organization contemplated would permit reduction of that sea power by individuals who are not thoroughly familiar with its potentialities, as has happened in several other countries."

Sesqui Committee Calls for New Deal . . .

The Washington Post

RECOMMENDATION READ—Joseph McGarrahy, chairman of the Sesquicentennial executive committee, reads to reporters the recommendation that the Sesqui's Freedom Fair be postponed. Other committee members listening are (from left) Commissioner John Russell Young, Congresswoman Mary Norton, Edward Boykin, director of the sesqui; and Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank inally planned and will constitute a prologue to the Freedom Fair.

"This will include completion of the memorial amphitheater in Rock Creek Park and presentation of the Paul Green symphonic drama commencing in June, 1950; the opening on schedule of the historical and art exhibits at the National Gallery of Art and the Corcoran Art Gallery and the many ceremonials commemorating historic events in the life of the Nation."

Only yesterday Representative H. R. Gross (R., Iowa) demanded that the Attorney General and the Comptroller General suspend all Sesqui activities" pending official investigation." Gross said taxpayers who put up the three million dollars voted last fall by Congress "have every right to know where their money is being dissipated."

The decision to throw open the Sesqui's books and to check on commitments made thus far followed revelation of two transactions which Freedom Fair officials were worried were giving the big show a bad name.

One was the fact that a vice president of the Gardner Displays, which has done much of the fair's work so far, also had been serving as the fair's director of design and exhibits. The firm currently has a letter of intent for the over-all design supervision of Federal exhibits.

The other was the Alexander affair. A Gaithersburg, Md., contractor has charged Alexander offered to get some fair construction business for him without competitive bidding for a 10 percent kickback fee.

Alexander appeared before the executive committee yesterday for 50 minutes to tell his side of the story—that he had done nothing legally or morally wrong. Either he or his wife now own 7½ percent of the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission Leasing Bureau which has a letter of intent giving it the right to lease the fair's 12 million dollars worth of space to exhibitors on a 5 percent fee, less expenses.

After hearing Alexander, the committee washed its hands of the whole affair with this statement:

"The executive committee of the Sesquicentennial has heard, at Mr. Alexander's request, his version of his negotiations with Mr. Parker (George M. Parker, the Gaithersburg contractor).

"The committee has also had the opportunity of hearing from Mr. (Joseph B.) Danzansky, president of the National Capital Leasing Bureau, Inc., such information as he could give with respect to this matter. It was developed, first from Mr. Alexander, that his transaction with Mr. Parker was not in connection with any buildings to be built under the auspices of the Sesquicentennial Commission and from Mr. Danzansky, that Mr. Alexander was not acting under any authority of his corporation, and neither did they have knowledge of his negotiations with Mr. Parker.

"Furthermore, Mr. Danzansky has advised that Mr. Alexander no longer holds an official position in the corporation although he still has a minor stock interest.

"From the facts as developed, it was the opinion of the executive committee that while the commission is obviously interested in any matters brought to its attention and will investigate them, in this particular instance the transaction is entirely outside the scope of the Sesquicentennial Commission or the executive committee thereof to control."

Leasing Bureau President

PAUL ALEXANDER
Tells his side of story

After yesterday's meeting, McGarraghy and Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, both indicated they believe the Freedom Fair would open on April 15, 1951. They also said it probably would run two years, that is, until the fall of 1952. Definite dates will have to be set by the full commission.

John Russell Young, President of the District Board of Commissioners and also an executive committee member, said that the committee wants "no secrets" and hence is calling for the review of contractual arrangements made thus far. Up to now, reporters have been unable to obtain a list of such agreements.

In discussing reasons for the Fair's postponement, Fleming noted that overtime pay costs would be enormous on such a big project and indicated he felt the buildings could not be built in time except under forced draft requiring night and day work. Plans are still in the drawing board stage.

McGarraghy also noted that there has as yet been no settlement of the problem of how to remove several temporary buildings now located on the Freedom Fair site at the foot of East Capitol st. and Kingman Lane, near the Anacostia River.

McGarraghy interpreted the reference to "temporary curtailment" of activities to mean the leasing bureau will have to hold up until new dates are set for the fair before it goes ahead with any contracts. It is not even certain that the bureau will, in the end, handle the leasing of space since no contract has as yet been negotiated between the Sesqui and the bureau.

Those on the Sesqui payroll will continue there, McGarraghy said. He said there had been no discussion of naming a general manager for the fair to supersede Edward Boykin, now the director.

50,000 Phone Workers Set For Walkout

St. Louis, Dec. 30 (AP).—Present plans call for a strike by 50,000 telephone company workers in six States any time after midnight tomorrow, a union official said late today.

He made the announcement shortly after a fruitless conference between the union, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. officials and Federal conciliators broke up.

At the same time, Gov. Forrest Smith of Missouri told reporters at Jefferson City he still had hopes of averting a strike.

Smith warned that if the strike is called, the State of Missouri armed with a law barring strikes against public utilities, will "throw the book at them."

Late today, Frank P. Lonergan, vice president of the union, said that, "As of this moment, we have not changed our plans for a strike anytime after midnight, December 31."

8 Feared Dead As Train Plunges In Argentine River

Buenos Aires, Dec. 30 (U.P.).—A speeding Argentine express train plunged into a creek today when a bridge collapsed.

Police estimated from 8 to 10 persons were killed and 75 injured, 15 seriously. At least five bodies were recovered from the wreckage lying in 3 feet of water.

Rescue crews, working into the night, cut through wreckage of two sleeping cars and a diner seeking more victims.

First reports said the engine and two cars crossed the bridge safely, but that other cars were derailed and smashed into the small bridge.

The train was bound from Buenos Aires to the remote northern city of Formosa in the Chaco Territory.

Wife Slays Grocer Meeting Other Woman

Columbus, Miss., Dec. 30 (U.P.).—Mrs. Vernie Holliday told police today she hid in her husband's auto before he went out on "business" and killed him when he met another woman and started kissing her.

Mrs. Holliday, 36, also was accused of banging her alleged rival on the head with a pistol. The dead man is a grocer, Eddie Holliday, 42.

The third figure in the shooting, attractive brunette Mrs. Estelle Moore, 34, insisted she really met Holliday on business. She denied they were making love when Mrs. Holliday appeared and started shooting.

Fur Union Agrees To 11 Pct. Pay Cut For N. Y. Workers

New York, Dec. 30 (U.P.).—The International Fur and Leather Workers (CIO) agreed today to an 11 percent wage cut for its 12,000 New York members.

The cut is effective from January 1 to June 16, the slack season in the fur business, but an employer spokesman hinted that the cut may not be restored on June 16.

Louis M. Loeb, impartial arbitrator in the fur industry, said the wage cut was contemplated in the contract signed in 1948. It was not tied to any decline in the cost of living, but was to be negotiated before the slack season started.

Some rank and file members of the union were reported critical of the cut.

Pastor Blames Wife's Prostitution On His Low Pay

Boise, Idaho, Dec. 30 (U.P.).—A Baptist minister and his wife today pleaded guilty to vagrancy charges after admitting they had resorted to prostitution because the 38-year-old pastor couldn't support his wife and three children on a clergyman's pay.

Police identified the couple as Roy C. Butler and his wife, Rachel, 35. They were arrested about 2 a. m. after a "customer" turned them in.

Each received a 30-day suspended sentence.

Butler said he holds a pastorate at Eagle, Idaho. He said the $210 he received each month as pastor would not support his family. He said he and his wife resorted to prostitution "about twice a month" to bolster the family income.

Mrs. Butler said she "usually tried to pick up well-dressed men."

700 More Defense Jobs Ended

Force had just about met its goal of eliminating 18,000 jobs. The Navy still was 10,400 short of its higher goal of 76,000, having been authorized by the Department of Defense to take longer in making its greater cuts.

At the Pentagon and nearby posts and stations, the situation was this: the Army had cut out 497 more civilian jobs than planned; the Navy 158, and the Air Force 56. Generally speaking, the USAF is not cutting its civilian personnel at headquarters Nearly 7000 layoffs were planned originally.

Not Cutting Officer Strength

Examination of the progress of the personnel cutback program also revealed that the Air Force does not expect to reduce its officer strength from that of last July, as originally indicated. While discharging some 5000 Reserve officers this year, they'll be replaced by newly appointed officers, a spokesman said.

The announced reductions in Army and Navy officer and enlisted strength, however, is proceeding on schedule.

Effect on the Services

Generally speaking, this is about the way the August economy program will affect the armed services:

1. Custodian personnel have been slashed heavily, resulting in poorer elevator service, less clean buildings, etc.

2. Fewer clerks, typists, etc. The work will get done but at a slower pace. Contracts will not be as carefully checked.

3. "Administrative transport" has taken a heavy slash, resulting in the firing of many chauffeurs. It's much harder for officials to get a car to go to Capitol Hill, etc.

4. Painting and repairs to buildings will be deferred.

5. Commissaries, post exchanges and libraries have had their staffs cut.

6. "Preventive maintenance" is cut down. There will be longer periods between overhauls of aircraft, trucks as well as many ships. This applies to radio, electronics and other equipment.

7. Saving of overhead personnal by closing down depots, yards, camps, etc., and sending the ships to be dry-docked, planes to be overhauled and men to be trained to other places. The Army is closing Camp Kilmer, N. J., and staging all its men bound for Europe from Fort Dix, for example.

However, in many cases, such as manufacturing and repair facilities, where highly skilled men are employed, it has been found advisable to keep the plants operating. Men in the scarce skills trades will move to another military locality, it has been found. Also, often it costs so much to close down and move equipment that no savings will result for 6 to 10 years, a detailed Navy survey showed.

For example, it was decided in the past few days to keep open the naval shipyard at Hunters Point, San Francisco, because no economies would result for nearly a decade. On the other hand, the decision to close the Long Beach Calif., shipyard, is certain to stand, unless the heavy political pressure applied to keep it open prevails.

Sales Records Here Reported For Yule, Year

By S. Oliver Goodman

The record-minded boys had some juicy sales figures to chew on last night.

From the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond came the joyous tidings that Washington department store sales not only set a new record for the week before Christmas but—

Probably rang up a new all-time high for December and for a 12-month period.

For the week ended December 24, the bank reported, local store sales soared 18 percent over the same 1948 week. This upsurge, in turn, pushed dollar-volume figures for the four weeks ended December 24 to 6 percent above the same period of record-setting 1948.

The upswing in the week before Yuletide reflected in part an extra day of Christmas shopping this year. Christmas fell on Sunday; last year it came on Saturday.

Aggressive post-holiday promotions by local merchants indicated that the current week may have kept up the record pace.

For 1949, it was estimated that store sales here will be about 1 percent above the previous year, which was an all-time high. Despite the smallness of the margin over the previous year, it must be remembered that only one other city among the 30 largest will show a sales increase this year. That one is New Orleans, also with an estimated 1 percent gain for the year.

Nationally, store sales in the four weeks ended December 24 showed no change from sales last year. For the year through December 24, sales were off 5 percent from the like 1948 period.

RECORD CLEARINGS: Washington bank clearings in December and for 1949 set new all-time peaks, according to George H. Bright, manager of the Clearing House Association. This month's clearings totaled $354,290,029, highest for the year and 4 percent greater than in the same 1948 month. The 12-month aggregate was $3,890,071,956, a gain of 6 percent over the $3,661,078,549 in 1948.

Inherited Frailties Seen Peril to Race

By a Post Reporter

New York, N. Y., Dec. 30. — Modern medicine with all its miracles may be building up an artificial man whose inherited frailties may destroy the human race.

Herman J. Muller, Nobel prize winner and retiring president of the Society on Human Genetics, feels inferior man is surviving long enough to pass on his weaknesses to his children and his childrens' children.

The trouble is, Dr. Muller told the society at Hotel Governor Clinton, that the recessive genes are far more apt to survive than the so-called dominant genes. The genes are those factors which control inherited tendencies.

Dr. Muller, of the University of Indiana, Bloomington, estimated that today about 1 out of 20 persons who would ordinarily die are saved to maturity (and the procreation of another generation) by present-day drugs and surgery. These, he said, include the children born with congenital defects who in adulthood pass on these defects to their children.

Recessive genes, he said, are thereby permitted to continue their cycle of continuing weakness to the children and the children's children for generations to come. Even today, he declared, man is living on time borrowed from the generations to come.

"My fellow mutants," declared Dr. Muller, "every one of us is today the carrier of at least eight deleterious mutations (gene changes which transmit congenital defects to the children). If this continues, and particularly if the mutations affect our mental powers, nature will win out in the end."

Among the deleterious mutations cited were transmitted inheritances of diabetes, congenital heart defects, and others.

Real Fish Story

8-Lb Shadow Fails to Win Liar's Crown

Burlington, Wis., Dec. 30 (U.P.). "Honest John Goerlich won the title of world's biggest liar today.

Goerlich

Goerlich deposed that on his first fishing trip he got a bite and asked his guide what to do.

"'Reel him in.'"

"I reeled the trout right up to the tip of the pole," Goerlich said. "There I was alone. The guide had wandered into the woods. The pole was so long I couldn't reach the fish. How was I to get that fish?

"Well, I stuck the butt of that long, limber cane pole into the ground, drew my trusty hunting knife, climbed the pole and stabbed the fish to death."

George Johnson, Delavan, Wis., was disqualified for telling the truth. He wrote that his feet got so tough from going barefooted all summer he had to put ground glass and steel shavings in his socks to wear off the callouses.

"I know that guy and he's telling the truth," one of the judges said.

Leroy Griffin, Brunswick, Me., got in a windstorm.

"We lost about everything," he wrote. "An aunt of mine lost her voice. We found it again, 20 miles away, embedded in a stone wall."

Then there was E. Stanley Evanson, Eagle Bend, Minn., who caught a northern pike so big its shadow alone weighed 8 pounds.

Midwife's Fee Brings Pledge Of Chastity

Rome, Dec. 30 (U.P.).—The 300 husbands of Monte Flavio sleep alone tonight.

Their wives solemnly vowed today they would not share their beds until their favorite midwife, known simply as Vanda, 22, returns to the job with her cut-rate prices.

The dispute was reminiscent of ancient Greece's Lysistrata, who led the women of Athens to deny their favors until an agreement was reached. It arose when the regular midwife, Bruna Paolini, left her post—a government civil service post in Italy—and went to Rome to look for a better job.

Vanda replaced her. She charged only $7.50 for delivering a child. Bruna charged $15.

Then Bruna returned. The 300 Sabine wives refused to let Vanda go. The husbands made the mistake of laughing. But it was no joke to the women. It was the most serious thing that had happened since their maternal ancestors were assaulted by the Romans in the historic rape of the Sabines.

"Maybe they've been waiting ever since. All these generations, to get back at men in general," one citizen commented.

The women gathered and discussed the matter. They prayed over it in church. Today they took a vow of chastity—until they are assured Vanda will remain. The husbands must appeal the case right up to the Civil Service Department in Rome, they said.

"If this keeps up," one disturbed husband said, "both Vanda and Bruna will be out of a job."

Doctor Out In 'Mercy' Case

yesterday when a periodic check of records at Hillsboro County Hospital brought to light Dr. Sander's signed report on the injection. Confronted by investigators, he was quoted as replying:

"It was an act of mercy. There was never any malice in my heart."

Dr. Sander was accused in the warrant with killing Mrs. Barroto "feloniously, willfully and of malice aforethought."

Dr. Robert E. Biron, county medical referee, declared 10 cubic centimeters of air would not be enough to kill a human being—but said more than that had been injected.

Counsel for Dr. Sander, appealing for his release under bail, called the case a "so-called mercy killing." Prosecutors had no objection to freeing him on bail.

Bonds for Dr. Sander were put up by Dr. David W. Parker of Elliott Hospital, where Dr. Sander was a staff member, and Carl Nute and Rudolph Keller, insurance executives.

One of his visitors in jail was his pastor—the Rev. Mark B. Strickland, minister of the First Congregational Church, who said: "I hold Dr. Sander in very high esteem. He is a man of character and integrity."

Dr. Sander told the Associated Press he was innocent of "any legal or moral wrong," and "ultimately my position will be vindicated."

His wife, Alice, said, "To anyone who knows my husband, the thought of such a charge is impossible."

Nature Fights Tooth Decay

trees from Dutch Elm disease, a fungus ailment imported from Europe which has attacked elm trees over the entire northeastern United States since its start in Ohio in 1930.

The new compound prevents infection of healthy elms but does not save those already diseased. The medicine is put into the soil around the base of the tree, and watered down to the roots. It acts against the toxin produced in the "sap stream" by Dutch Elm fungus, it alkalines the soil and stimulates the tree vigor.

Preliminary report of research with radioactive phosphorus to detect the presence of viruses of many human diseases was made here by Mrs. Luolin S. Altenburg, of Rice Institute, Houston, Tex.

Divorce Statistics Held Unreliable

New York, Dec. 30 (AP).—Briefs from reports to the American Association for the Advancement of Science today:

American divorce statistics are too incomplete to be reliable, says Federal Statistician Samuel C. Newman. In one unnamed State in one year 44 percent of the residents took out marriage licenses and 15 percent got divorces, if you believe statistics. These, he said, were wrong.

Split personality mental troubles have been traced to deficiency in hormones from adrenal glands, little hat-shaped things in the small of your back.

American schools are building upper and lower classes in this country, says Dr. W. B. Brookover, Michigan State College.

Plants Held More Efficient Than Man's Best Engine

New York, Dec. 30. (AP).—Discovery that photosynthesis work of plants far surpasses the efficiency of man's most powerful engines was reported to the American Association for the Advancement of Science today by four researchers of the National Institute of Health at Bethesda, Md.

Photosynthesis is the way plants take energy from sunlight for growing and making their fruits and foods. By this discovery the plants use 60 to 85 percent of the energy in the sun rays that touch their leaves. This is more than twice as much as had been supposed. The best efficiency of engines in using the energy in fuel is seldom more than 30 percent.

Dean Burk, S. B. Hendricks, V. Schocken and O. Warburg said that how plants absorb so much energy and how they use it without getting hot is one of the unsolved quests of science. Predictions about setting up miles of glass pipes that will relpace farms, and make human food continuously, independently of seasons, are based on hopes of uderstanding photosythesis.

X-Rays May Aid in Study Of Air at Supersonic Speed

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 30 (AP). X-rays present a promising method for the study of air flows faster than the speed of sound, a Navy scientist disclosed today.

Miss Eva Winkler of the Naval Ordnance Laboratory, White Oak, Md., completed the air density measurements by X-rays—an experiment begun but not completed by the Germans during the war.

Another White Oak scientist, Paul A. Thurston, showed supersplit photographs of bullets moving 7000 feet a second.

Tribute To Luchs

It is certainly no discredit to the work of Frank J. Luchs that the 1949 Community Chest campaign must be put down as the fifth successive failure. Mr. Luchs, whose devotion was honored at a luncheon yesterday, has given practically full time to his position as general chairman since his appointment last April. He has brought young and vigorous leadership to the Chest drive, and his enthusiasm and managerial ability have shown results in several important respects. Organization of the crew of volunteer solicitors, for example, was a vast improvement. And although only 89.13 percent of the goal was reached, the campaign brought in $115,000 more than last year and a larger percentage of the community was represented in the gifts.

A post-mortem to determine where the campaign fell down is, of course, essential. Doubtless analysis will show certain organizational failures, such as the lack of sufficient follow-ups in residential districts. Possibly the extensive streamlining which was set up to prevent duplication of effort has not been sufficiently explained to contributors. It is important to assay the influence of the growing number of separate private appeals for funds. Probably, too, there ought to be more stress on the fact that the Chest must actually subsidize public relief because of the time-lag before public welfare agencies can take needy cases. The requirement here is for more adequate public welfare funds to reduce the drain on the Chest.

But the basic lack, as always, is a feeling of community responsibility on the part of individual citizens. It is a disgrace that an area of nearly 1½ million persons can raise only a little more than $2 per resident. In all probability, however, Washington will remain "different" from other cities until its residents have political responsibility for running their own affairs. If Congress needs an additional argument for home rule, here it is. Meanwhile, the best that can be hoped is that more persons in the community will assume responsibility voluntarily and match the dedication of Mr. Luchs.

Educating Women

One of the most controversial topics of the present is: How should women be educated? It keeps bobbing up with increasing vigor. During the next two months debaters are scheduled to air their views in several leading magazines. And Dr. Lynn White, president of Mills College, who might be called the stormy petrel of the controversy, will elaborate his ideas in a forthcoming book, Educating Our Daughters. Dr. White contends that too many women today are being educated to be successful men, a pattern of education he says that was set up by feminists of the last century. He maintains that because of physical and psychological differences between men and women, education of girls should be related to their special aptitudes and interests.

The theory that modern woman is suffering from frustration because she has neglected her natural functions, talents, and skills, in order to compete with men has found many apostles of late. Education, as usual, is the scapegoat. Yet some leading women educators see in this a threat to the feminine "right to learn." They point out that women had a long fight to get the opportunity to go to college and to study what they desired, and that even now some graduate schools are closed to them. These educators also ask: What about the frustrated men—including the many who crack up mentally and who jump off roofs? Are men being educated properly for the lives they are to lead, for adjustment to modern society? And why should they not have some of the training in family and human relations that women are said to need so greatly? Basic higher education is sexless, these educators maintain, and what special training women or men need should come after the foundation of knowledge is laid.

A little over a century ago the debate over whether women's health, morals, brains and matrimonial chances would be destroyed by higher learning was waxing hot. And some form of public argument over women's functions and activities has marked every successive decade. Henry Adams, over a half century ago, was starting dinner table conversation by asking his dinner partner: "What's the matter with the modern woman?" (Occasionally at least the answer was "The American man.") We feel safe in predicting that woman and her education will still be questioned in magazine articles, books, and at dinner tables in 2050.

Business In 1950

Six months ago, when production was declining and unemployment rising, many business forecasters regarded these developments as forerunners of a serious depression. The Washington Post did not share these pessimistic views. Despite recession, consumer incomes remained at high levels and the huge volume of savings in consumer hands provided additional support for sustained buying. There was also comfort in the fact that consumers did not share the fright of the pundits. Consequently, there was good reason to believe that when the business adjustments made necessary by the subsidence of inflation and the disappearance of goods shortages had been effected, the recession would be followed by a business upturn. This turned out to be the case. Although the steel and coal strikes brought about temporary declines in the activity of durable goods industries this fall, the post-recession recovery that started in midsummer was set back only temporarily.

Most business forecasters are now looking forward to high business activity, at least during the first half of the coming year. Just as The Washington Post decried the tendency to exaggerate the long-range effects of the postinflation recession, so it fears that the belatedly optimistic view of the immediate business outlook may also be misleading. These misgivings are not based on a belief that short-range predictions of good times ahead are wrong. They are based on the reasons assigned for predictions: Government deficit spending, spending for defense and foreign aid, GI insurance dividend payments, farm price support and Government-financed public housing. Obviously, the forecasters are relying on the Federal Government to give business an inflationary shot in the arm and justify their predictions.

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, looking beyond the immediate future, is more cautious—and, in our opinion, wisely so. He preaches the "wisdom of a tempered optimism." That is the bureaucratic way of admitting that industry is faced by a good many obstacles to sustained high activity that might lead to another business downturn. Among those mentioned are the reduced earnings of small businesses which interfere with expansion of plant and equipment, heavy taxation, and persistent demands for wage increases at a time when businessmen are trying to reduce or hold down costs.

While Mr. Sawyer reports an improvement in conditions in distressed areas where unemployment is high, he admits that substantial unemployment still exists in some parts of the country. Many students of business trends are concerned not only about the persistence of such localized unemployment, they are wondering whether the country's industries will be able to absorb some 600,00 job seekers who will enter the labor market in 1950. Unless the growth of population is accompanied by a steady expansion of industry that will provide jobs for all such newcomers without displacement of other workers, chronic unemployment is bound to result.

The year 1950 will also be a critical year for farmers. For surpluses are piling up and prices have declined, although farm incomes are still far above prewar levels. The high cost of agricultural price support policies might lead to collapse of the whole system. Changes are therefore essential and cannot be indefinitely delayed. In short, if we look beyond the next few months, we shall find a great deal to worry about. Perhaps the greatest of those worries is the knowledge that industrial prosperity, when sustained by heavy Government spending, rests on an unsound foundation. The problem of the future is how to provide the stimulus required to insure a high and expanding level of activity without calling on the Government for aid.

Lynchings, 1949

Tuskegee Institute's year-end report on lynchings during 1949 suggests the easy conclusion that this peculiarly odious—and peculiarly American—evil has been pretty well overcome. Three persons lost their lives by mob action in the course of the year. This compares with two during 1948, one during 1947, six during 1946 and one during 1945. Thus, for the five-year period, 1945-49, 13 lynchings have been recorded. By contrasting this with the five-year period, 1900-1904, during which 519 lynchings occurred, the recent record looks very favorable.

Nevertheless there lies behind this record a background in which deprivation of due process and denial of the equal protection of the laws are discernible as still the lot of Negroes in the South. One of the past year's victims was a young Georgia Negro charged with creating a disturbance and resisting arrest; lodged in jail, he was removed by a group of men, beaten and shot to death. The second victim was a Mississippi Negro tenant farmer reported to have "hogged the road" and failed to move his wagon over fast enough to permit a group of white men riding in a motor car to pass; he was beaten to death. The third victim, a Negro landowner in Georgia, was found riddled with bullets after an argument with a group of white men who had been fishing in his pond without permission.

The lynchings were few in number. But no doubt they were powerful in effect. No one can calculate their impact in terms of intimidation and repression of Negroes, or in terms of their corruption of the whites who enjoy the spurious supremacy they help to enforce. There can be no great gratification over the record until the threat of lynchings, as well as lynchings themselves, is wholly extirpated from American life. No lynchers were convicted for participation in the 1949 lynchings.

The record of lynchings avoided by resolute law-enforcement officers is more heartening. In 13 separate situations, 6 white persons and 11 Negroes were saved from mob violence by police who accorded them the protection to which they were entitled under the law. Firm acceptance of responsibility on the part of the police for the protection of prisoners in their custody is, of course, the key to the lynching problem. Too often in these cases the police are actual accomplices of the mob. Respect for the law must begin with them.

Navy Promotions

Suspicions that the Navy promotion list had been used as a vehicle of reprisal against officers who participated in the recent rebellion should be quieted by the publication of the list itself. Capt. Arleigh Burke, about whom much of the controversy centered, has been nominated for rear admiral. Irrespective of the indications that the list was changed after it left the Selection Board and that the decision to put Captain Burke back on the roster was made at the last minute, the gesture is reassuring.

Whether the transfer of Vice Admiral Gerald F. Bogan to a less-important post constitutes a reprisal is hard to determine. Admiral Bogan was the author of the memorandum criticizing unification which the peripatetic Captain Crommelin leaked to the press. It may be that this memorandum cast doubt on Admiral Bogan's judgment. In any event, it was necessary to give the new Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Sherman, some latitude in picking his subordinates. And there is a big difference between selectivity in assignments and tampering with a promotion list supposedly based solely on merit.

Both the four-star admirals who are retiring—Thomas C. Kinkaid and William H. P. Blandy—have earned just plaudits during their service. Retirement is mandatory for Admiral Kinkaid because of age. It is regrettable that Admiral Blandy has chosen also to leave. A fine figure of an officer, he is one of the Navy's best-rounded leaders, and he did a particularly competent job during the Bikini tests. He lost out on his chance to become Chief of Naval Operations, however, when Admiral Sherman was appointed.

The one unusual feature of the promotions is the elevation for the two aides to Secretary Matthews and one aide to Secretary Johnson. With no disrespect to these officers, who probably need flag rank in their jobs, it is scarcely coincidental that they were lumped together on a "merit" list. So that the merit system will not be distorted, would it not be wise to provide by law that these jobs automatically carry rear admiral's rank?

Dilemma On The Delta

In the matter of the reported Egyptian triangle involving H. M. King Farouk I, our sympathies are frankly and unequivocally on the side of Zaki Hachian, an employe of the United Nations Department of Economic Affairs. You will recall, if you have paid attention to this interesting romantic situation, that according to William Attwood, a New York Post correspondent in Egypt, the monarch first glimpsed the young lady in the case, 16-year-old Narriman Sadek, when she and her fiance, Mr. Hachian, were looking at rings in a Cairo jewelry store early this month. Seeing was beloving, so far at least as Farouk was concerned. But, Mr. Attwood reported, the Egyptian police then started shadowing Mr. Hachian, seized all the photographs of Miss Sadek in his apartment, and told him to get going forthwith to his post at Lake Success.

The Egyptian Ambassador in Washington, Kamil Bey Abdul Rahim, has sent to the United Nations a categorical denial of the report that Mr. Hachian was harassed by the police. But he has not denied the rumor that King Farouk intends to marry Miss Sadek on his thirtieth birthday, February 11. The way we see it, the King ought to go off to Lake Success for a while and leave Mr. Hachian a fair field in Cairo in which to woo and, if he can beat the blandishments of royalty, win the fair lady.

Our partisanship in this affair is not based on any vulgar preference for commoners over kings. We like royal romances. We cheered for the blue-blooded beaux of Wally Simpson and Romaine Simpson just as lustily as we cheered for the red-blooded beau of Sloan Simpson. We are not even biased in Mr. Hachian's behalf because of his Harvard education and his presumable Americanization. We just want to see fair play, that's all. What happened to Uriah the Hittite shouldn't happen, in our opinion, to an Egyptian.

HIGH OR LOW THE HEART IS

Higher than the meadow runs the valley's ridge;
Higher still the mountain merges with the sky;
Higher still, oh higher, no larger than a midge,
The topmost pine tree catches the clouds as they float by

Lower than the rushes waving in the pond,
Lower still a tadpole wriggles out of sight;
Lower still, far lower, lurking just beyond
The sunken log, a trout broods in the green half-light.

High or low the heart is, singing with the wind
In the airy churchways, floating in the deep
Clear cool water where the reeds have thinned—
High or low, no matter, there's wealth that all may keep.

Half Century

The following thoughts occur in connection with recent discussion of whether the half-century ends with December 1949 or December 1950.

When you spend $19.49 you have not spent all of 19 dollars and a half.

In December, 1900, the City of Washington celebrated its 100th anniversary, but the ceremonies were also considered as commemorating the end of the nineteenth century, and as such were participated in by President McKinley and the Diplomatic Corps.

On December 31, 1900, was written the Latin ode of Pope Leo XIII, commenting on the closing century thus: "A noble age, fosterer of good arts, is dying. Whoever cares may commemorate in song the public conveniences and the forces of nature that have been brought to light. More keenly do the errors committed by the declining century touch me; for these I grieve and wax wroth. Oh, shame, how many monuments of disgrace do I perceive in looking back."

Political Labels

Dual labeling of politicos is the most intelligent innovation in that field in the present century. We now have Senator Lehman, Democrat - Liberal; Representative Javits, Republican-Liberal, and Representative Roosevelt, Democrat-Liberal. But why not make such distinction compulsory? And why confine it to liberals?

We political amateurs (plain voters, that is) are gullible folk. We are victims of our own oversimplification. For instance, our two present major parties are presumed to exemplify widely divergent basic principles. The Democratic Party was supposed to represent the "Jeffersonian" theory of personal liberty, diffused governmental responsibility, with emphasis on "State rights." The Republican Party was supposed to have inherited the "Hamiltonian" theory of a strong centralized government, with emphasis on Federal control and responsibility. If we accept those theses literally, then it is probable that the two greatest "Republican" Presidents since Lincoln were Woodrow Wilson and Franklin Roosevelt.

To heighten our obfuscation, a high protective tariff was thought to be the birthright of the Republicans, while Democrats favored "free trade." Yet the tariff, as such, has ceased to be a major partisan issue since the Hoover Administration.

Getting down to cases, anyone can name many leaders of both parties who range in political ideology from extreme radicalism through the various shades to extreme reactionarism. Why should Senator Morse and Senator Bricker be in the same party? Or Senator Pepper and Senator Byrd?

So, until all conservatives get into one party and the liberals into another—with perhaps the radicals forming an unimportant minority third party—why not insist on dual political trade marks?

Republican Program

Vice President Barkley in a recent address challenged the Republican leaders to state what present Federal expenditures they would cut. So far the leaders have failed to answer this. Here is an answer from a little man, a Republican of the old school but one who is not afraid of progress and precedent breaking.

First the Republican Party would fully adopt the Hoover Commission Plan for Government reorganization, thus saving three billion dollars; secondly, we would stop the European giveaway, with a saving of 2½ billion dollars; thirdly, we would cut the appropriation for the Army and for the Navy but add to the Air Force, with a saving of 1½ billion dollars. Our fourth measure would be a thorough investigation of the graft in the GI apprentice training. We believe in a just help to veterans but we know it is greatly abused. This would save one billion dollars.

We would pass a farm aid bill that would be largely self-supporting. We are sure that American ingenuity can work out an equitable farm plan that is not a burden on either the consumer or the taxpayer. This will mean a saving of 500 million dollars.

This makes a total saving of 8½ billion dollars. The deficit is estimated at 5½ billion dollars. The balance of three billion dollars we would pay on the national debt. And if we pay three billion dollars every year without fail and refuse to fight any more of Europe's wars, the national debt will be paid off by the year 2036.

We are strongly against socialized medicine and Federal aid to schools. We feel that any civil rights legislation only tends to stir up race hatred and that each State can handle this question best. We also believe that the Taft-Hartley law should be amended so that no labor leader can call a strike without a majority vote of the members.

Traffic Deaths

I wish to file an emphatic dissent to some of your headlines. In your December 25 issue you printed "Cars Kill Four . . ." Cars never at any place or time kill or injure anyone. No, cars don't kill or injure folks; persons misusing or mishandling them do.

University In Exile

Referring to the "University in Exile" in your report of December 22 as having been established during World War II, it should be stated that this term was originally used in connection with refugee scholars from Nazi Germany.

The University in Exile was founded by Dr. Alvin Johnson as the graduate faculty of political and social science of the New School for Social Research in 1933. One of the coorganizers and members of the faculty was my brother, the noted economist from Heidelberg (later Berlin), Emil Lederer, who died in 1939. Among former or present members of the faculty are Carl Mayer, Hans Simons, Jacob Marschak, Gerhard Colm, Hans Staudinger, Erich Hula, Felix Kaufmann, Hans Speier. In the same year, 1933, the periodical Social Research was started, an international quarterly of political and social science.

The school expanded when its gates opened to French refugee scholars during World War II. MAX LEDERER.

DPs and Jobs

I note in the current press that the "President Pleads for Refugees," but I plead for those whose jobs taken thousands of newcomers have taken during the past year and who are now numbered among the five million who are out of employment, to say nothing of those who are on part-time work.

While I have sympathy for the "refugees," whether real or pretended, I have a greater and abiding sympathy and interest in our own, and I hope that Congress will not permit itself to succumb to the sandbagging that has been going on in the interest of those who will victimize our own people.

There is too much attention paid to the demands of the foreign or neo-citizens in the interest of the Old World peoples, based on their voting power. Votes, and not the country's interests, seem to me to be an important factor in this DP movement. Our help should be where the displaced are. They should not be brought here to further confuse our economic and political as well as social situation.

Attacking Heart Disease and Cancer

There seems to be material for an editorial in your excellent story of December 24 on our national vital statistics.

The report shows that the total deaths from tuberculosis in 1948 reached a new low of 43,833. Heart diseases headed the list of death causes with a total of 471,469 victims. Cancer and other malignant tumors claimed 197,042 lives. Together, heart diseases and cancer accounted for almost half of the 1,444,337 deaths reported during 1948, your report says.

The figures obviously indicate that the campaigners against tuberculosis are winning their crusade. On the other hand the crusade against heart diseases and cancer seems really not yet to have been started.

Yet the emphasis is all on the campaign against tuberculosis. The Christmas season, when the national generosity is at its peak, is the period sequestered for the antituberculosis campaign. And almost everyone is involved in it. Christmas seals—a name superbly timed — are delivered by mail to about everyone who has a mailing adress. School teachers are enlisted to promote the sale of seals in addition to those sent to the homes, and little children are urged to buy seals and pressed into service to sell more at home. Seals on Christmas mail now is a national practice.

Against all this there can be no protest. The results have been splendid. But the emphasis now seems to be on the wrong disease. When more than four times as many die of cancer and other malignant tumors than do from tuberculosis, and more than ten times as many die from heart diseases than do from tuberculosis, we seem to be putting our greatest push into a lesser cause and letting two far greater causes take the leavings in our attention.

And "leavings" here is not an abstraction. The little coin boxes placed around some downtown buildings during the heart campaign and during the cancer campaign showed no such organized push behind them as there is evidenced each year at Christmas time behind the antituberculosis seals. Yet the need evidently is ten and four times greater.

Something should be done to bring the situation into a better proportion. The work against tuberculosis of course must go on. But work surely must get going on a far greater scale against heart diseases and cancer LEO WOLFSOHN.

Christening The Fifties

By Malvina Lindsay

Field Day for Seers

LIKE EVERYONE else I am getting out my crystal ball and taking a look at tomorrow. Furthermore, I am tackling a decade.

How will the 1950s eventually be christened? With an adjective beginning with "f"—inevitably. But not "fabulous," "feverish," "florid," "frenzied" or "furious." The world is too old and troubled. Not "feminine," as their counterpart of a century ago was called in Fred Lewis Pattee's book The Feminine Fifties—partly because of its many "scribbling females."

"Fearful," perhaps? Possibly—if the forces of timidity and isolationism prevail. "Futile"? Yes—if the decade degenerates into such an ominous time of fatalistic waiting as preceded the Civil War.

"Fighting"? No—and again yes, depending on how a few persons keep or lose their heads.

"Fantastic"? Likely enough, if atomic energy is put to peacetime uses. At any rate, we are promised bottled sunlight in our walls, face-to-face contact over the telephone (isn't progress wonderful!), gadgets that will make household tasks 50 percent easier, with two-times-a-year marketing.

"Flourishing"? There's a good chance for it—barring a hot war. Economists are optimistic. Cycle authority Edwin R. Dewey says we may "well be moving into the Nation's greatest years." The 1950s could be wonderful—if we'd tackle our overproduction problem with a daring, imaginative, expansive approach.

"Famous"? Maybe—if Einstein's new equation and other work in pure science now going on in laboratories, on blackboards, in Einsteinian minds, yield revelation of a scheme of things now seen "through a glass darkly."

YES, THERE are a lot of "ifs" and "buts" in these predictions. The usual hedging. Well, here's one that's flat.

Come weal or woe, hard times or good, war or peace, one outstanding development of the 1950's will be man's awakening to what a remarkable gadget he is himself. He will find out that he can move a great many mountains without aid of atomic energy—rather by pressing buttons wired to his own thought and feeling.

One does not have to be a crystal gazer to foresee this. Every day intimations of it crop up in the headlines. From every gathering of scientists comes this underlying note.

In New York, where 10,000 of the country's leading scientists this week have been discussing mathematical equations, population, aboriginal man, other scholarly topics, there also is heard a call to the country to train more teachers in human understanding. Science has found that a teacher's approval or blame attitude greatly affects the progress of pupils.

Also from this scientific meeting comes backing for old wives' wisdom. The old weather seers with their proverbs and jingles were right 68 percent of the time, an investigation has established. This reinforces the theory that poets, artists, philosophers, prophets, sense things that science catches up with later.

ON ALL sides these days we run up against what seems the almost frightening power of our emotions both on ourselves and on others. Almost every week, it seems, a new disease is added to those found to be caused or at least heightened by anxiety, envy, fear, hate. Psychosomatic medicine develops so rapidly many doctors are trailing it.

Man's hunger for esteem—favorable emotions—from his fellow men is reflected in every day's news, in crimes, stunts, achievements, strikes. Parents hear constantly the need of expressing to children the all important gift, love. Labor-management problems move more and more toward the human equation.

Primitive peoples in faraway places are stirring with a new sense of self-esteem, reaching out for recognition and respect from peoples who consider themselves more advanced. Even in physics laboratories there is recognition that the ultimate reality so far known is man's consciousness of the world about him.

Nothing seems so important—to this volunteer soothsayer at least—on the eve of 1950 and of a new decade as that we appear to be moving into a new sense of emotional power, one that makes each of us a conscious dynamo for good or ill. This power could even give the decade a name beginning with an "f"—the Forceful Fifties.

Transit Fare Raise

The Capital Transit Co. faces a $64 question, which, as usual, it is planning to dump in the laps of its weary riders. This letter is an appeal to the riders to let the company know how they feel about raising the fares again.

Let's all band together and send postal cards with a fresh opinion on each to the editor of this paper as to what we think of the imposition that all of us face.

Readers must also have some idea as to what the company can do to remedy its situation.

Progress In Control Of The Opium Evil

By Mrs. Hamilton Wright

Member of the American delegation to the International Opium Conference at Geneva and former assessor to the opium advisory committee of the League of Nations.

UNDER THE auspices of United Nations and as the guests of the Turkish government, the representatives of Iran, Turkey, Yugoslavia and India recently met in Ankara to deal with a problem of much significance to America and the world. Forty years ago, the United States exposed an evil that long had prostrated and benumbed the peoples of Asia and was fast spreading its sinister course throughout the world. This was the opium evil.

Today the solution of the problem is in the hands of the United Nations, which is to be congratulated on the results already achieved at the conference now reaching its conclusions in Ankara. Specifically, the committee has unanimously agreed to make specific recommendations as to the methods to be used for determining the total world requirements of opium for legitimate medical and scientific needs and for fair distribution among the opium producers. Also, for the establishment of government opium monopolies; the creation of an international purchasing and selling agency and means whereby the limiting of the cultivation of the opium poppy could be accomplished, and an agreement drawn up to which the governments of all states in which opium is produced or used would agree.

THE MOST difficult question was the allocation of shares to the opium-producing countries, which was achieved as the result of mutual concessions on the part of the governments represented to whom the restriction of their opium revenue was a serious consideration.

The international purchasing and selling agency which the committee proposes will, in fact, be an international opium monopoly, having the exclusive right to buy opium from producing countries and to sell it to consuming countries. It will be established within the framework of the United Nations as a non-profit-making corporation with commercial functions.

As a conclusion, the committee recommended to the United Nations Commission on Narcotic Drugs that a meeting between representatives of the principal opium-producing countries and of the principal manufacturing countries should be held in the spring of this coming year to draw up a draft for approval by the Economic and Social Council in July or August of 1950.

AMERICA'S part in this crusade deserves attention. When the United States took over from Spain the Philippine Islands, we discovered that we had inherited as well the opium monopoly system. This was at once abolished by Theodore Roosevelt, who denounced a system that sought to obtain revenue based on the corruption of Eastern peoples for whose well-being and protection Western nations had assumed responsibility. In 1909, President Roosevelt invited the governments interested in this nefarious traffic to meet in Shanghai to discuss ways and means whereby this evil could be controlled and finally eliminated.

Many meetings and conferences called by the United States succeeded the initial meeting at Shanghai. Three international opium conferences followed in quick succession at The Hague. Still later conferences were held at Geneva, dealing with this troublesome question. With the termination of World War I, the opium problem was taken from the jurisdiction of the Netherlands by the Versailles Treaty and was placed in the hands of the League of Nations—where, for 20 years, the problem received much publicity but no solution.

During these many years the United States contended that only by restricting the cultivation of the opium-poppy to the world's legitimate medicinal need could a permanent solution be achieved. This contention on the part of America received little support, but definite opposition on the part of nations deriving revenue from their Eastern colonies based on the insidious drug.

It has been a matter of great significance to note that in the midst of wars two of the outstanding nations of the West, securing for generations a rich harvest of revenue based on the traffic of opium, should simultaneously have announced their intention of prohibiting the further use of smoking-opium and of abolishing the opium monopolies in their colonies of the Far East.

THE SOLUTION of the opium problem now rests in the hands of the countries of its greatest production—Turkey, Iran, Yugoslavia and India. While no easy task confronts them, it should be emphasized that these countries are not asked to cease all production, as the opium of the group of countries meeting in Ankara is rich in its morphine content and must therefore hold an established place in the medicinal markets of the world and can still remain as an item of importance on their budgets, but based on its legitimate good to mankind rather than its power to corrupt. If the restriction of opium leads to the substitution of Western capital on a large scale and in consequence to the revivifying of old industries and the encouragement of new, it will be a direct impetus to the development of these Eastern nations along advanced and modern lines with the added advantage of winning world-wide approval and the cooperation of the West.

It is worth marking that 25 years ago the United States showed its practical interest in the solution of this vexatious problem by proposing at the International Opium Conference at Geneva that a nonpolitical commission of experts be sent to the opium-producing countries for the purpose of making a thorough investigation and determining what other crops and commodities could take the place of opium over and above its medicinal need without undue disturbance to national budgets. While little enthusiasm was evinced by the Geneva conference as a whole, the Iranian representative showed special interest in the project, and the League of Nations finally concurred in the sending of a commission of inquiry to Iran, which from the first had shown great interest in the proposals of the United States.

Mr. Frederick Delano, uncle of President Franklin Roosevelt, was appointed as chairman of the commission. Mr. John Rockefeller evinced his interest in the solution of the opium problem by contributing more than half the expenses of this commission. An excellent survey of conditions in Iran was made. A report full of valuable suggestions as to substitutes for the overproduction of the drug, and their resultant contribution to the budget, were proposed. Its recommendations unfortunately have never been put into effect.

It is believed that definite progress has been made toward the solution of the opium problem by the meeting soon closing its sessions in Ankara.

Shah of Iran Leaves for Home With Guarded Aid Assurance

The young Shah of Iran left for home yesterday, taking friendly but guarded assurances from President Truman of further American help for his country.

He turned down an offer of President Truman's personal plane, the Sacred Cow, for the return journey, and chartered a big Dutch airliner instead. The Shah found the Sacred Cow too small for the imperial party of 14, and anyway it didn't have a pressurized cabin.

A joint statement by the President and the Shah, issued at the White House, contained three carefully phrased promises of what the United States might do for Iran in the coming year.

The first was that the United States would support an Iranian application to the World Bank for "economically justifiable loans" to help Iran's seven-year development program. The World Bank has agreed to send a mission to Iran, but not until February or March, when the first specific loan projects will be ready for it to consider.

The second assurance was that "subject to favorable Congressional action" the United States would send technical advisers under the Point Four program, if Iran wants them.

The third was that the United States would "continue to bear in mind Iran's defense needs in connection with further foreign assistance which may be considered by the United States Government."

Translated, this meant that Iran could hope to be included in any new request for foreign military aid that may be sent to Congress. Iran already has a small share of the present billion-dollar military aid program.

The Shah told reporters at the airport in New York that he felt "much better" after a week-long checkup in the New York Hospital.

"The doctors did not find anything seriously wrong with me," he said. "I must have another checkup in six months."

His younger sister, Fatemah, accompanied him with his staff of 12 on the long flight back to Tehran.

Eisenhower's Star

By Marquis Childs

Antidote for GOP Isolationism

GOV. THOMAS E. DEWEY'S statement removing himself from consideration as a candidate for President is no more than recognition of the reality. It was unlikely to the point of downright impossibility that a twice-defeated candidate could capture the Republican nomination for a third try at the Presidency.

Childs

With the licking of November '48, Dewey's political stock dropped nearly to zero. It has revived scarcely at all. And the defeat of his good friend, John Foster Dulles, in his race for the Senate in New York State has acted as a further depressant.

But while Dewey no longer has the power and the prestige of a leader who can show the way to victory, he has remained the head and front of an important wing of his party. That wing might be designated as the Eastern sector of the GOP, although its limits are by no means geographical.

In this wing of the party are those who believe the United States must assume a role of world responsibility through such means as European aid and the program to restore the military strength of western Europe. They are for the bipartisan foreign policy as it has been spelled out by Senator Arthur Vandenburg of Michigan.

These Republicans have in recent months been turning hopefully in the direction of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. Now that Dewey has publicly removed himself, they will feel far more urgently the need to rally around a potential candidate in whom they can believe.

WITHOUT such a rallying point they may find themselves consigned to oblivion within their own party. The resurgence of isolationist America-Firstism threatens to swamp the GOP if only by volume of noise. The Wherrys and the Jenners mean to reject Vandenberg, and back of them is Senator Robert A. Taft with his own curious definition of how America can live alone and like it.

But the difficulty in trying to use Eisenhower as a rallying point is formidable. First and foremost is the fact that, in the political sense of the word, he is not a candidate. That is what he continues to tell his visitors with considerable emphasis.

Nor could he at this time, even if he wanted to, permit himself to become a candidate. That would be the surest way to reduce to the vanishing point any influence he may exert on the course of events in America. And Eisenhower feels a responsibility to speak out.

His views have not changed. They are just the same as they were when the ill-advised attempt was made by some of the Labor-Liberal elements—James Roosevelt among them—in the Democratic Party to draft Ike for the Democratic nomination in 1948. Eisenhower is a strong believer in States' rights and the need to decentralize authority so that the individual will have a greater responsibility.

WITH THIS goes a belief that there must somehow come about a new dedication to the well-being of the whole Nation. But when the general tries to express these deeply held but not very clearly thought out views, he is inevitably tagged as a candidate.

There is growing evidence that his enemies as well as his friends and admirers consider him a formidable possibility for 1952. A scurrilous attack on Eisenhower in crudely printed form is being circulated through the mails.

It is headed "Wake Up, America! General Ike the Kike!" It intimates that Eisenhower is of Jewish origin and declares that "our late Caesar" transmitted a "law" to him for "the destruction and ruination of Germany."

While this may be attributed to the screwball and extreme hate fringe, it nevertheless is symptomatic of the dark forces that would like to turn this country back to violent nationalism. Similar manifestations of the same slimy hate came to the surface when Eisenhower was being clamorously urged to consider the Democratic nomination.

This is a symptom which Republicans in the isolationist wing of the party should heed. They would, almost without exception, reject this extreme of hate and pathology. But their danger is that they may wind up with these rabid extremists riding on their bandwagon and giving the impression that they are in fact part of the band. Nothing would more quickly alienate the great mass of Americans.

U. S. Skipper To Defy Ban At Shanghai

Hongkong, Dec. 30 (U.P.).—Capt. (Two Gun) Davey Jones, 31, skipper of the Isbrandtsen freighter Flying Arrow, said today he would take his shipload of inflammable cotton and chemicals into Communist-occupied Shanghai despite Nationalist warships and mines.

But many members of the 43-man crew said they would sail with him under protest. Their spokesman said the only reason they were making the trip was because most of them did not have sufficient funds to pay their fares home.

The Flying Arrow is one of three ships the Isbrandtsen Line is sending into blockaded Shanghai in the next month in defiance of the United States State Department's warning to American shipping that captains doing so would lose their licenses. The Flying Arrow is in port here loading cargo for the trip next week.

Jones said he had received three warnings from the State Department but added: "My pay checks are still signed by (President Hans) Isbrandtsen, who told me to sail into Shanghai. When the Secretary of State signs my checks I'll listen to him."

Members of the crew joked about visiting "Davey Jones' locker," but with an undertone of tension and foreboding.

Fireman Joe Galdes, 43, who has had two ships sunk under him in 25 years of maritime service, said he is afraid to take a chance on running the blockade.

P. R. Becker, first assistant engineer, cabled his wife in Chatham, N. Y., to remit funds for passage home.

Hongkong Gets War Powers Against Reds

Hongkong, Dec. 30 (A.P.).—This uneasy British colony on the fringe of Communist China gave its governor warlike emergency powers today to meet attack or internal disorder.

Publication of the regulations came at a time when Hongkong is plagued by labor difficulties that may develop into a general strike. The situation has explosive possibilities, as all unions in the colony are under strong Communist influence.

Simultaneously, the Communists were reported making minor infiltrations and feeler thrusts against Formosa, Hainan and lesser island positions of the Chinese Nationalists.

The Nationalist news agency reported several thousand Red troops stormed ashore Christmas night on the island of Matsu, 100 miles northwest of Formosa, but were repulsed with heavy casualties.

The Nationalist agency reported also Nationalist planes for the second successive day had helped break up Communist preparations for a heavy amphibious assault against Hainan, 10 miles off China's south coast. Hainan coast artillery was credited with halting small-scale Red feelers by boat.

Bonn Gets Nazi Property

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 30 (A.P.) The United States High Commission today announced that control of former Nazi Party members' property, valued at about 35 million dollars, has been handed over to the West German government.

Viet Nam Formally Set Up

Saigon, French Indo-China, Dec. 30 (U.P.).—A new nation—the monarchy of Viet Nam—was born today under the shadow of the Chinese Communist colossus to the north and under the threat of a possible invasion.

It is torn by a war against Communist-led rebels who have kept it in turmoil for four years.

French High Commissioner Leon Pignon and Emperor Bao Dai signed a series of agreements creating the new, independent Viet Nam State, a member of the French Union, in a simple ceremony in Saigon's City Hall. Bao Dai will rule the country, but the French will retain control of foreign affairs and defense.

The agreements will become official only when they are ratified by the French Parliament, but ratification is certain.

The new state comprises the French colony of Cochin-China and the French protectorates of Annam and Tongkin. The two remaining states of Indo-China, Cambodia and Laos, are monarchies within the French Union.

Pope Plans Special Mass

Vatican City, Dec. 30 (A.P.)—Pope Pius XII will celebrate New Year's Day mass for Holy Year pilgrims in the Hall of Benedictions, largest chamber in the pontifical apartment. Some 3000 are expected to attend.

U. N. Council Seat Taken By Yugoslav

Lake Success, Dec. 30 (A.P.).—A former-Partisan fighter, Ales Bebler, 42, handed in his credentials today as Yugoslavia's delegate on the U. N. Security Council. This was one more step toward a Russian-Yugoslav squabble expected to open in the Council late next week.

Bebler ranks as Deputy Foreign Minister of Yugoslavia, putting him on the same rank with Jakob Malik, the Soviet delegate. He has the reputation of being a tough diplomat.

Speculation has been that Malik will challenge Bebler at the first Security Council meeting after the new year. During the U. N. Assembly the Soviet Union fought to prevent Yugoslavia's election to the Council and threatened dire consequences.

Peron Vetoes His Own Promotion to General

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Dec. 30 (U.P.).—President Juan D. Peron vetoed his own promotion to full general today when he eliminated his name from the list of army, navy and air force officers promoted by the Senate.

Peron signed the Senate list but his name does not appear on it although it was at the head in the original version.

Peron holds the rank of brigadier general now.

India Blames Pilot In Air Death of 45

New Delhi, India, Dec. 30 (A.P.)—Indian government inquiry committee today blamed a pilot's "error of judgment" for the crash July 12 of a KLM (Royal Dutch Airlines) Constellation near Bombay that killed 13 American news correspondents and 32 others.

The plane, returning from Indonesia, was circling in a monsoon rain in an effort to land when it rammed into a hillside.

Joint Chiefs To Visit Japan

the situation for Secretary of State Acheson.

By February, when the Joint Chiefs are in Japan, the Administration may have reached policy decisions on Asia which were still undecided last night. Many disagreements between Government departments, and within some departments themselves, still have to be settled before there can be an Administration program.

Two Republican Senators who recently visited the Far East, William F. Knowland (Calif.) and H. Alexander Smith (N. J.), kept up the pressure on the Administration yesterday to produce a "positive" program of helping the Chinese Nationalist government, now headquartered on Formosa.

Knowland told the Overseas Writers' Club at luncheon that he is "convinced" Chinese Nationalist troops can hold Formosa if they get adequate support from the United States. He said the Nationalists' morale was good, but added:

"They need aid now, and not a year from now after the dust has begun to settle."

Knowland hinted that he would vote for withholding Marshall Plan aid from any European country that recognized the Communist regime in China.

Both Knowland and Smith complained that the Administration was not consulting Republicans sufficiently in making up its mind on Far Eastern policies.

Smith said he had discussed the Formosa question with Secretary Acheson, but insisted that Republicans must have a voice in forming the policies

"Bipartisanship means to me bipartisanship in the making of the policy as well as in carrying it out," he said. "If they will play the game with us, we will go along with them."

The Chinese Nationalists have "informally" asked the United States to send advisers to Formosa, Press Officer Michael J. McDermott told reporters at the State Department yesterday.

Formosa Has 250 Former U. S. Tanks

Taipeh, Formosa, Friday, Dec. 30 (U.P.).—More than 250 former United States Army tanks have arrived here since mid-October and a number already have been in action against the Chinese Communists, usually reliable sources here said today.

The tanks, according to the sources, were declared surplus and demobilized by the U. S. Army. They were obtained in a barter deal and then rearmed by the New York City agents for the Nationalist Ministry of Defense, the informants said.

The tanks, which included at least 30 medium M-4s, were landed at Kaohsiung in southern Formosa, the informants said, where their crews have been undergoing intensive training.

Reds Claim Annihilation Of Nationalists in West

Hongkong (Saturday) Dec. 31 (U.P.).—The Communist radio today claimed "annihilation" of the West China armies of Nationalist Gen. Hu Tsung-nan, unsuccessful defender of Chengtu. His armies were the last important Nationalist forces on the mainland.

The President's Calling List

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday had the following White House appointments:

10:00 a. m.—Cabinet.
12:00 noon—Fred Lawton, Assistant Budget Director.
1:00 p. m.—Lunch.

Field May Have Been Seized In Prague, Wife Now Believes

London, Dec. 30 (U.P.). — Mrs. Hermann Field, whose husband vanished somewhere behind the Iron Curtain last August, said today she thought he might have been seized by Communist authorities in Prague rather than Warsaw as previously believed.

The Cleveland (Ohio) architect last was seen at the Warsaw airfield, where he planned to board a plane for the Czech capital. Crewmen of the plane said he did not make the trip, and his sister-in-law Herta—who also now has disappeared—said he never reached Prague.

Mrs. Field said, however, that she did not regard the statements of the air crewmen as "conclusive evidence that my husband did not take the plane as planned."

Mrs. Field, who has been waiting here with her two sons in hope of hearing some word from her husband, said she previously had refused to talk to newspapermen because "the American Embassy has always assured me that everything possible was being done to find out who had arrested my husband."

She decided to break her silence today because "four months is a long time for him to be held incommunicado, and for me and his two small children to be anxiously awaiting news from him."

Hermann was the second of three members of his family to disappear in Communist-held territory in seven months.

Noel Field, his brother and Herta's husband, disappeared while visiting Prague last May. His wife, Herta, last was heard from a few days after Hermann's disappearance.

Two Party Girls Acquitted of Extortion Charges

Los Angeles, Dec. 30 (A.P.).—Two Hollywood party girls today were acquitted of extortion charges, growing out of an affair one of them had with a wealthy television school operator.

The pair, red-haired Helen Keller, 27, formerly of Selinsgrove, Pa., and Toni Hughes, 29, chubby brunette from New Rochelle, N. Y., were accused in seven counts of taking some $9000 from Ben Klekner, 49, of Hollywood.

The jury of seven women and four men—one less than usual because of a members illness—had deliberated for nearly two days.

The case was an outgrowth of a recent Los Angeles vice quiz.

Milan Normal In General Strike Called by Reds

Milan, Italy, Dec. 30 (U.P.)—Italy's Communists suffered another in a series of defeats today when a 3-hour general strike they called in Milan—heart of the "Red Belt"—failed to paralyze the city.

Workers in the highly unionized big factories observed the call-out and transport was stopped for 45 minutes. But banks, shops and offices did business as usual, and the city's life was normal.

The Communist-controlled Chamber of Labor called the strike in protest against injury of six steel workers in a clash with police last night.

Governor James Folsom of Alabama for his fight against "the Ku Klux Klan and the forces of bigotry and intolerance."

Friday Rite

Cathedral To Install 3 Canons

Three canons who recently joined the staff of the Washington Cathedral will be officially installed in services Friday at 4 p. m. in the great choir of the cathedral.

They are the Rev. Dr. Richard Williams, the Rev. Charles Martin and the Rev. Luther D. Miller.

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, will install the canons designate after they are presented by the Very Rev. John W. Suter, dean of the cathedral. Music during the service will be sung by the boys' choir.

Dr. Williams, formerly associate rector of the Church of the Epiphany, was elected a canon of the cathedral in October, assuming at the same time the duties of director of the diocesan department of social relations.

Maj. Gen. Luther D. Miller, former chief of Army chaplains, was elected a canon and member of the Presbytery at the November meeting of the cathedral chapter. General Miller, who formerly served as an honorary canon, resigned from the chaplaincy corps this month, after nearly 30 years of service.

Canon Martin joined the cathedral staff when he became headmaster of the St. Alban's School for Boys last May. He formerly was associated with the teaching staff of the Episcopal Academy of Philadelphia where he was assistant headmaster for 14 years.

$31,000 Given To Ecuador for 'Quake Victims

A check for $31,000, representing contributions from public institutions, Pan American societies and private individuals in the United States for relief of earthquake victims in Ecuador, was presented to that country's Ambassador here yesterday.

The check was turned over to Ambassador Augusto Dillon in a brief ceremony at the Pan American Union by Dr. Alberto Lleras, director general of the Pan American Union.

More than half of the fund—some $17,195—was contributed by military and civilian personnel at Fort Meade, Md., in response to an appeal.

Bates' Son Enters Race For Seat in Congress

Boston, Dec. 30 (AP).—Lieut. Comdr. William H. Bates, 32, today formally entered the race to succeed his Republican Congressman father, who was killed in the worst plane crash in United States history.

Young Bates filed at the State House nomination papers for his father's seat in the Sixth Congressional District. Three other candidates have filed. The special primary will be held January 24 and the special election February 14.

The elder Bates was one of 55 persons killed in an airliner crash at Washington, November 1.

Probe of Coffee Prices To Reopen Next Week

Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa), said yesterday his Senate Agriculture Subcommittee will reopen its coffee price inquiry next week in an effort to halt newly soaring prices.

He said the price has "increased substantially" since his hearings were postponed until after the holidays.

He again blamed high prices on "speculative interests."

Parker, who made the presentation, told Luchs he had stayed at the "front line post of command longer than any of your predecessors in this job."

"You have given personal attention to every major policy development as it was worked out, traveling all over the Washington area to transform plans into actions," Parker said, adding, "You are an inspiration to everyone with whom you come in contact."

"Red Feather Oscars" were presented to eleven unit chairmen in the Government Unit at the luncheon. Those who received the awards were Fred G. Fraser, Veterans Administration; Mrs. Maybelle G. Montgomery Eases Death Of Pound Dogs

A water connection to filter the death-dealing gas used at the Montgomery County Animal Shelter to destroy stray and unclaimed dogs has been installed in response to request by county dog lovers.

The additional equipment was added, according to Ben Hall, personnel assistant to the county manager, after Stanford Chester, president of the County Animal Rescue League, declared use of the unfiltered gas resulted in needless pain to the animals.

The filtered gas, Hall said, produces death by asphyxia rather than by the more painful suffocation resulting from use of raw carbon monoxide.

The chamber, a box-like affair about 5 feet in all dimensions, will soon be moved from its outdoors location to a room inside the shelter, Hall said, to remove the possibility of water pipes bursting in freezing weather.

The chamber was installed about two months ago and was constructed in accordance with specifications submitted by Chester, Hall said.

12-Man Group To Study Parking In Arlington Area

A 12-man committee was named yesterday by Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundberg to study Arlington's growing parking problems, particularly in the Clarendon area.

The committee, it was announced, will meet at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday with Lundberg in his office in the county courthouse to discuss the parking situation. Letters of appointment were mailed yesterday.

Formed December 17 at the request of the county board, the committee consists of Thomas W. Phillips and Ray L. Miller of the Chamber of Commerce; Stanley K. Mayer and Thomas E. Sebrell 3d, Clarendon Business Association; B. Alden Lilywhite and H. Herbert Howe, Arlington Civic Federation.

Court Upholds State's Right In Segregation

Baltimore, Dec. 30 (AP).—Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut ruled today in favor of the Bureau of Recreation and Parks in a damage suit directed at its racial segregation policy.

Upholding the State's right to impose segregation where comparable facilities are provided, the judge decided against a group of 21 white and negro plaintiffs who sought $505,000 in damages.

They contended that the park board regulations for segregation of athletic activities—including tennis, golf and basketball—were unconstutional and a violation of their civil rights.

The case was regarded as a test, but Chesnut's opinion noted that it differed from normal test cases in that it did not seek to establish a new point of law.

Sauer Resigns Because Navy Fires His Assistants

Vic Bradford, Ingalls Are Ousted, No Reason Given

By Whitney Shoemaker

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 30 (AP). — George Sauer stepped out as head man of Navy football today because the Academy wanted to break up his coaching staff.

Sauer resigned as head coach after two seasons at the Naval Academy. He did so when the Academy athletic association decided to drop Line Coach Bob Ingalls and Backfield Coach Vic Bradford as assistants.

That was the only explanation given by Capt. Howard Caldwell, director of athletics.

Caldwell declined comment other than to say "the statement speaks for itself." Ingalls and Bradford have been with Sauer four years, two at Kansas and two here.

Sauer, whose 1949 Navy squad won three games after a long spell of losing, called Ingalls and Bradford "two mighty fine fellows."

Declaring he has "not even thought yet" about the future, Sauer praised both his assistants and his team.

"I regret the fact we won't be together when I know the Midshipmen are going to start winning games," Sauer said. "After the improvement they showed this season, they're bound to start winning."

Of Ingalls and Bradford: "They have proven to me that they know football and can coach it."

Coach Two Seasons

Sauer, 39-year-old former All-America fullback at Nebraska, came to Annapolis two seasons ago. His arrival ended a 15-year period during which Navy relied on active officers as head football coaches.

A veteran of the Navy's physical training program in World War II, Sauer returned to civilian life in 1946 and became head coach at Kansas. He piloted the Jayhawks to Six Six cochampionships in two successive years. His 1947 eleven played in the Orange Bowl.

Then Sauer signed a four-year contract with Navy. His salary was never disclosed, but the contract had two more years to run when he submitted the resignation. In his two seasons here, Sauer's 11s won 3, tied 2 and lost 13.

In his nine years as a head coach, Sauer has won 41 games, lost 32 and tied seven.

Ingalls and Bradford accompanied Sauer on a yearly-renewal contract basis.

Bradford said he learned only yesterday that the athletic executive committee had decided not to retain him and Ingalls.

Apparently Sauer had not suspected the move. Caldwell announced the resignation after a lengthy private conference with the

Vacancy Will Be Filled Quickly by A Civilian

By Bus Ham

Post Sports Editor

The new head football coach of the Naval Academy, succeeding George Sauer, will be another civilian, Capt. Howard Caldwell, director of athletics, said last night.

Sauer resigned suddenly yesterday because the academy fired two of his assistants, Line Coach Bob Ingalls and Backfield Coach Vic Bradford.

"There will be no change in the academy's policy of hiring a civilian coach," Caldwell told The Washington Post from his Annapolis office.

Caldwell Gets Busy

Caldwell indicated that he expects to fill the vacancy quickly—may already have a successor in mind.

"I expect to have something for you next Monday or Tuesday," he said. "I'm getting busy right away. I was going to Dallas to the Cotton Bowl game but I'll stay here and work on this now."

What Navy wants this time in a civilian, Caldwell said, "is someone who is familiar with our peculiar problems at the academy."

When names were mentioned, Caldwell said: "Please, let's not get into that. Just give me until next week and I'll have something."

Caldwell was reluctant to say specifically why the year-to-year contracts of Ingalls and Bradford were not renewed.

Sauer Had 4-Year Contract.

It was obvious, however, that the academy was not satisfied with their performance.

Sauer, who signed a four-year contract when he came to the academy two years ago, could have stayed on as head coach, Caldwell said.

The 38-0 licking that Navy absorbed in the Army game unquestionably figured in the academy's decision to shake up the coaching staff.

The margin of that defeat was "pretty hard" for Navy men to take, and there have been mild rumblings about "what assurance do we have of improvement for next year?"

Navy had no replacements in mind for Ingalls and Bradford, and the new head coach will have a free hand in selecting his assistants.

Bandies Tatum's Name

Sauer Wasn't Consulted On Firing of Aides, He Says

GEORGE SAUER told The Washington Post last night that he had NOT been consulted in the Naval Academy's decision to fire his two assistant coaches, Bob Ingalls and Vic Bradford.

"The first I knew about it was when I went in to see Captain Caldwell (director of athletics) to talk about our plans for 1950," Sauer said.

"Both of their contracts were ready to expire, and when this subject came up, I was shown a statement saying that Ingals and Bradford would not be retained.

"No explanation has been given to me personally as to why their contracts were not being renewed."

Sauer said he had "not the slightest intimation" that the academy was about to shake up the coaching staff.

"Usually when something like this is about to happen, you hear about it for weeks, but not this time. I knew that Navy people were pretty low after the Army game, but about all that anyone ever said to me was, 'sure hope things are better next year'."

Sauer's sense of humor was working even at a moment when he was wondering where his next job would be.

The vacancy at Florida University was mentioned.

"Jim Tatum (Maryland coach) is going to take that, isn't he?" Sauer said.

No, he says he isn't, as of five minutes ago, Sauer was told.

"Well, then, maybe he'll take this Navy job," Sauer remarked.

Shriners Fear Storm May Mar East-West; Blue Line Tests Gray's T and Passing

Southerners Bank Heavily On Tidwell and Campbell

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 30 (AP).—It's the battle of the "T's" in the Blue-Gray football game here tomorrow, but the 20th letter of the alphabet has a triple meaning.

To the Yankee invaders, it stands fo rtough, which is about as good a way as any to describe the mass of humanity they call a line.

In the Southern dialect, "T" means tricky or terrific, whichever you prefer to call a backfield that includes some of Dixie's finest.

And on both sides it's the symbol for the "T" formation rival coaches—three from each squad—decided on as the best way to put on a good offensive show in the week they had for practice.

In other words, it's power against speed and deceptive aerial shots. The North has the strength on the ground, the South the passing.

Two of the best overhead marksmen below the Mason-Dixon line—Travis Tidwell of Auburn and Paul Campbell of Texas—are primed to carry most of the offensive load for the Rebels. Tidwell, recovered from a leg injury, is back in the shape he was in 1946, when he gained more ground than any other player in the Nation.

On the receiving end are Cliff Coggin, the Mississippi-Southern end who broke the national pass-catching record this year, and Dick Sheffield, Tulane's star in that department.

Besides them, there's Tulane's plunging Eddie Price, who can double in pass-receiving almost as well. William and Mary's passing star Buddy Lex isn't acquainted with the "T," so he'll be used in rushing. Yankee line average averages 220.

If the Blues do much passing themselves, they'll depend mainly on Mel Olix of Miami (Ohio) U., and Bernie Krueger of Illinois.

A sellout crowd of 22,500 is expected for the game which starts at 1:45 p. m. (CST).

LeBaron and Berry's Magic Would be Hobbled in Mud

San Francisco, Dec. 30 (U.P.).—East and West all-star football teams fretted about the weather tonight on the eve of the silver anniversary renewal of he Shrine Game Classic and hoped rain wouldn't put a damper on the expected all-out aerial circus.

The weatherman said the tail end of a violent Pacific Northwest storm may bring more rain to Kezar Stadium, already damp from showers earlier in the week.

That would be bad news for some 60,000 fans who sold out the bowl six months ago and even worse news for the West team of 24 college seniors, whose hopes for victory rest on the passing magic of two 160-pound tailbacks —Lindy Berry of Texas Christian and Eddie LeBaron of College of Pacific.

The All-America-studded East team, an eight-point favorite, also would lose some of its offensive steam if the field comes up mud, since it is sparked by Army's Arnold Galiffa, a great passer.

But the East has the heavier line, anchored by All-America's Leon Hart of Notre Dame, a 260-pounder; Ed Bagdon of Michigan State and Clayton Tonnemaker of Minnesota, plus a fine array of power runners.

East Coaches Andy Kerr, Bevzan and Tuss McLaughry have corraled some of the best backs in the quarter century of the Shrine game, such as Lynn Chandnois of Michigan State, Hillary Chollett and Pete Dorset of Cornell, Art Murakowski of Northwestern, Wally Teninga and Dick Kempthorn of Michigan, Frank Spaniel of Notre Dame and Harry Szulborski of Purdue.

The West has its runners too, in Oregon State's Ken Carpenter, who almost single-handedly upset Michigan State; Little Ernie Johnson of UCLA.

Fighter, 20, 'Critical' After K. O. in Garden

New York, Dec. 30 (U.P.)—Carmine Vingo, a 20-year-old heavyweight from the Bronx, suffered a "critical" head injury tonight when he was knocked out by Rocky Marciano at 1:46 of the sixth round in a bout at Madison Square Garden.

Vingo was carried from the ring on a stretcher and taken to St. Claire's Hospital. He still had not regained consciousness when he arrived at the hospital. Oxygen was being administered to the young fighter.

In attendance at the hospital were Dr. Vincent Nardiello of the boxing commission staff and Dr. Carl Peterson, a brain specialist.

Dr. Nardiello, who examined Vingo in the ring immediately after the knockout and in the dressing room, at first diagnosed a "slight brain concussion."

He said Vingo's left side is paralyzed, and it will take from 24 to 48 hours before he can determine if the condition is temporary.

Nardiello said tests indicated Vingo did not have a skull fracture.

Hospital officials disclosed that Vingo was given the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church as he lay on the table in his dressing room at the Garden. The rites were administered by the Rev. Paul Gallivan of Boston.

Vingo never regained his feet after the knockout. He was on the canvas for the third time when Referee Harry Ebbets counted him out. A smashing left hook to the chin had dropped him backwards to the floor.

Marciano, unbeaten in 25 straight professional fights, dropped Vingo for a count of nine with a looping straight right in the first round and he floored him again for nine with a right in the second session.

King Paces Bullis Bowl Win, 20-7

By Morris Siegel

Post Reporter

Daytona Beach, Fla., Dec. 30—Bullis Prep, short of victories all season, scored a king-sized success in the second annual Shrine Beach Bowl Game here tonight.

Quarterback, Dick King, 17-year-old 160-pounder from Lancaster, Pa., scored three touchdowns as the Little Admirals from Silver Spring smacked down favored Castle Heights Military Academy of Lebanon, Tenn., 20-7.

It was a sweet victory for Coach Harry Deming's District eleven. The Prepsters had won only two of their nine games games during the regular season while the Tennesseans had been beaten only once in the same number of outings.

A crowd of 7428 saw the shifty-footed King score in the first, second and third quarters to lead Bullis to its victory.

The alert Admirals recovered two Castle Heights fumbles for their first two touchdowns. Halfback Matias (Chow) Echaves raced 69 yards on a punt return to set up the third six-pointer.

The Silver Spring footballers went 4 yards for their first score, 45 for their second tally and 18 for the third touchdown with King crossing the goal line each time.

End Dawson Ryder reclaimed an Eddie Baker fumble for Bullis midway the first period on the Tennesseans' 4-yard line. King went over on a quarterback sneak on second down. Gene Million's placement made it 7-0.

Castle Heights pushed over its touchdown in the second period, going 20 yards after intercepting a Bullis pass. Tailback Eddie Baker passed 17 yards to End J. D. Myers and Fullback Ray Cross plowed over from 3 yards out for the score. Baker passed to Myers for the extra point and the score was tied at 7-7.

Forty five seconds before halftime, however, Bullis broke the deadlock when King climaxed a 45-yard drive by going over on a quarterback sneak again. Dayton Warfle's kick gave the Prepsters a 14-7 halftime lead.

Globetrotters, Caps on Bill Here Tonight

The Washington Capitols and Harlem Globetrotters, who teamed in a Chicago Stadium double-header which attracted 20,046 customers last season, are cofeatured again tonight in a Uline Arena doubleheader.

The Globetrotters open the program at 8 o'clock by playing the New York Celtics, coached by Henry (Dutch) Dehnert.

In the 9:30 nightcap, Washington plays the New York Knickerbockers, who have won 20 and lost 11, and are second in the National Basketball Association's Eastern Division. Washington is third with a 13-14 record.

This will be the Globetrotters' second appearance of the year at Uline, and they own the arena's basketball attendance record for the season. They attracted 4400 while beating the Philadelphia Sphas by 30 points six weeks ago. At Chicago last season, the Harlemites beat the Minneapolis Lakers, 49-45.

Their key man is Reece (Goose) Tatum, and helping him along are Marques Hanes, Babe Pressley, Nat (Sweetwater) Clifton and Elmer Robinson.

The Caps have several good reasons for wanting to beat the Knicks.

In two previous meetings this season, the Caps were beaten.

La Salle Blasts Hoyas From Unbeaten Ranks

Atlantic City, N. J., Dec. 30 (AP).—Unbeaten Georgetown's five-game winning streak came to a resounding halt here tonight as LaSalle walloped the Hoyas, 90-58, at Convention Hall.

The Philadelphians were rebounding high from a previous night's two-point loss to N.I.T. Champion San Francisco. In the second half alone tonight, LaSalle scored 52 points, eight more than it scored during the whole San Francisco game.

LaSalle used its second team during most of the first half, and the Hoyas, after trailing, 14-7, rallied to go ahead, 21-17.

Then LaSalle Coach Ken Loeffler inserted his first team, and it was no contest.

Set shot artist Bob McCann sparked the Quaker City team to a 36-26 lead before John Brown and John Mazziota scored for Georgetown. At half time, the Hoyas trailed, 38-30.

Tommy O'Keefe, the Hoyas' best ballhandler, and one of their best set shots, returned to the game in the second half after a collision midway in the first half sent him to the bench with a twisted ankle. The return of O'Keefe didn't help though.

Walt Colman scored all 18 of his 18 points for LaSalle in the last half, and the Philadelphians pulled away. Colman was high scorer and teammate McCann was next with 15. For Georgetown, high pointmaker was Brown with 12.

N. C. State Wins Dixie Title, 50-40

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 30 (AP).—Favored North Carolina State found Penn State's zone defense troublesome for 18 minutes tonight, but then began to roll for a 50-40 victory and the Dixie basketball classic championship.

Forwards Dick Dickey and Sammy Ranzino were the top performers in an offensive that ripped into the Penn State game defense to overcome a 26-23 halftime deficit and bring the Wolfpack home winging.

Dickey scored 14 points, Ranzino 13.

In earlier games Georgia Tech defeated West Virginia, 63-48; Rhode Island State won the consolation championship by beating North Carolina, 65-60, in overtime, and Duke nipped Wake Forest, 54-52, to win seventh place in the tournament.

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 30 (AP).—Navy cashed in on the free throws and Southern Methodist didn't, so the Tars won 53-50 tonight in the opening game of the Cotton Bowl Basketball Tournament.

In the second game, the St. Louis Billikens beat Baylor, 58-50, to advance to the finals against Navy.

Navy sank nine free throws out of 13 attempted while Southern Methodist could get only 14 out of 32.

It was rough and tumble game but most of the roughnes was on the part of Navy. Billy Wilson, Navy center, was put out of the game for putting a block on Fred Freeman, Southern Methodist forward. Freeman fell heavily, striking his head on the floor, and he was unconscious for a moment. Twenty-five fouls were called on Navy.

Colts Eliminate Ray Flaherty, Prefer T-Coach to Single Wing

Baltimore, Dec. 30 (AP).—The Baltimore Colts today scratched Ray Flaherty as a prospective coach.

President Abe Watner said the former Chicago Hornet coach has been eliminated because he is a single wing advocate. The Colts want to stick to the T.

Norman (Red) Strader, Clem Crowe and Lowell Dawson remain on the interview list. Strader, the New York Yankee coach last season, was here for a talk yesterday.

Crowe, who succeeded Dawson at Buffalo, is due here tomorrow or Monday. Negotiations with Dawson, now on the West Coast, probably will be carried on by phone.

The Colts are seeking a successor to Walter Driskill so he can go back to the front office. Driskill, the general manager, stepped in last season when Coach Cecil Isbell was let go after losing the first four games.

90-Hole Golf Listed

London, Dec. 30 (AP).—The first 90-hole medal play tournament in British golf will be staged at Harrogate, in the English midlands, next July. Most medal play tournaments are 72 holes.

One 18-hole round will be played on each of the first two days with the 100 leading scorers moving into a third round. Then the field will be cut to 50 for the final 36 holes. All five rounds will count in the final scoring.

Still Coy on Florida

'Gator Game, Not New Job, Present Objective, Says Tatum

Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., Dec. 30 (AP).—Coach Jim Tatum of Maryland today said he had told officials recently he could not be considered for the University of Florida coach position—but he didn't completely remove himself from the picture.

He was asked about rumors that he might already have accepted an offer to become head coach, replacing Bear Wolf who resigned several weeks ago in the midst of considerable controversy over the university's continued losing football streak.

Tatum said that if he had been chosen for the job and if announcement was being withheld until the Gator Bowl game Monday with Missouri as rumored, he knew nothing about it.

In a statement to the Associated Press, Tatum said:

"I can guarantee you that I am not an applicant for the job and as far as I know I am not being considered. I don't know what Florida's plans are and I haven't been offered the job.

"I talked with officials about it not long ago, however, but the talks were entirely unofficial. We talked about salaries in a general sort of way and I told them how I liked to work.

"They asked me if I would like to be considered for the job and I told them no, that I could not be considered because I had a Gator Bowl on my hands and that was enough for the time being and that I was not looking for a job.

Kentucky Wins 3d Sugar Bowl Title

New Orleans, Dec. 30 (AP).—Kentucky won its third Sugar Bowl basketball championship tonight, 71-66, over Bradley with a brilliant second-half charge

Bradley managed a short revival in the final three minutes but could not overtake Kentucky. Tulane defeated Villanova, 58 to 55, in the consolation first game.

Byrd Seeks Showdown With Tatum on Fla. Job

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 30.—Dr. H. C. (Curley) Byrd,, University of Maryland president, arrived here today to see the Gator Bowl football game, and to have a showdown meeting with his coach, Jim Tatum.

Obviously disturbed over press reports that Tatum is considering a bid to coach football at the University of Florida next season, Dr. Byrd said he planned to thrash the matter out.

Bob's Conduct 'Unbecoming'

Feerick, Two Others Fined $50

New York, Dec. 30 (AP).—Coaches Joe Lapchick of the New York Knickerbockers and Bob Ferrick of the Washington Capitols in the National Basketball Association were fined $50 each today by Loop President Maurice Podoloff "for conduct unbecoming a coach" in recent games.

Podoloff did not explain and did not give details.

At the same time he fined Blackie Towery of Baltimore $50 for slugging James Pollard of the Minneapolis Lakers in Wednesday night's game.

Last Tuesday in Rochester, Ferrick was ejected from the Caps' game with the Royals after a vigorous protest of the referee's decision. The Caps lost the game, 96-72.

Yanks Refuse to Trade Lindell for Marchildon

Philadelphia, Dec. 30, (AP).—The New York Yankees have refused to trade Outfielder John Lindell for Pitcher Phil Marchildon of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Arthur Ehlers, assistant to A's' Owner-Manager Connie Mack, said today that the almost completed deal was called off by New York.

"The Yanks offered us Lindell for another of our pitchers but Mr. Mack telephoned from Florida that he wasn't interested," Ehlers said.

Ehlers said the A's were willing to trade the Canadian right-hander for Lindell even-up.

Coaches Gloomy

'We Can't Lose,' Say Terp Players

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

PONTE VERDE BEACH, FLA., Dec. 30.—Most football coaches are characteristically gloomy as the big game approaches and Maryland's staff is no exception.

Pessimism which has been their by-word since the season started today was deeply ingrained in Jim Tatum and his cohorts as their football squad entered the last lap of preparations for Monday's Gator Bowl game against Missouri.

But how do the boys who'll butt heads against the Tigers from Columbia, Mo., feel about the game.

In one word, wonderful.

From Captain Fred Davis down to the 44th member of the squad, there's a unanimous feeling that not only will Maryland win but by a handsome margin.

"This is my fourth year of football at Maryland," Captain Davis said, "and I've never felt more confident about a game than I do this one. We can't lose."

Center Jake Rowden of Duncan, Ariz., a fierce tackling linebacker is even more confident.

"The way we've looked in practice the past few days, we would give Notre Dame a helluva ball game.

"We're fired up for this one, the spirit is wonderful. We've worked hard and played hard since being down here and we'll beat their pants off," said Rowden.

Quarterback Stan Lavine puts it this way. "Don't worry, it's in the bag. But gee, I wish I could convince Coach Tatum of that."

END ELMER WINGATE admits he was worried about the game for a few days, "but now I don't see how we can lose. We've scrimmaged against the Missouri version of the split T and checked it. I know our line is better than theirs from pictures I've seen. We'll win. I just feel it."

Tackle Chester Gierula, a 230-pound defensive workhorse thinks Maryland will not only win, but "we'll smother them. This is the first game I've ever really been worked up over. The fellows tell me that when I get worked up over a game, it's really something, that it's a cinch we'll win."

Guard Bobby Ward, in his quiet way, analyzed it in this manner.

I'm confident we'll stop them on the ground. The only thing that we have to fear are their running pass plays. But I feel we have a strong and fast enough line to exert great pressure on their passers, rushing them off their feet and forcing them to throw off balance.

"We did this against Harry Agganis, of Boston, the best college passer I've ever seen, and they don't have an Agganis or a line as good as Boston's. We've got the guns and we'll fire them."

Even Trainer Duke Wyre, who usually innoculates himself with several stiff shots of 100 proof gloom, was all smiles after today's last rough workout.

"If we could play them today," he said, "it would be a rout. I don't know what's gotten into these boys. But whatever it is I hope it stays with them. They've never felt or looked better."

IN SHORT, unless ticket sales boom sharply in the next few days, the game will not be a sellout.

There are still about 8,000 tickets, mostly end zone seats remaining to be sold. The stadium holds 38,000. Missouri concluded its Fort Lauderdale practices today and arrives in Jacksonville tomorrow afternoon for a drill in the Gator Bowl Stadium.

State Share Drops Less Than 4%

Baltimore, Dec. 30. (AP).—Parimutuel betting in Maryland declined less than 1 percent this year from the 1948 total—thanks to the harness racing plants.

The annual report of the State Racing Commission showed that $11,751,941 went through the mutuel windows at the three harness tracks. That was $8,044,890 more than bet on harness racing in 1948, when only one track was in operation.

There was a entirely different story from the flat tracks.

Betting at the four major tracks—Laurel, Pimlico, Havre de Grace and Bowie—dropped from $80,553,560 in 1948, to $72,453,041 this year or 10 percent.

A total of $14,011,432 was bet at the five one half mile flat racing tracks this year, compared with $14,682,119 last year.

Revenue to the State from taxes on betting at both flat and harness plants dropped from $4,569,520 to $4,396,887, a decline of 3.77 percent. Last year, revenues from betting dropped 10.15 percent from the State's take in 1947.

Tax Changes Costly

The report said that a change in the method of taxation on the betting at the half-mile county fair flat tracks cost the State $100,000. Therefore, if the 1948 taxation rates had been in effect, the loss of revenue to the State would have been only $72,632, or a dcrease of 1.58 percent from last year.

Wagering at Laurel Raceway, where State harness racing was inaugurated in 1948, totaled $5,274,093 for the 20-night meeting this year. That was 42.27 percent more than the $3,707,051 bet there last year.

Ocean Downs and Rosecroft were the two harness tracks to hold their opening meetings in 1949. A total of $2,246,070 went through the mutuels at Ocean Downs, and $4,231,778 was wagered at Rosecroft. Both held 20-night seasons.

Racing Committee To Study Purses

Baltimore, Dec. 30 (AP).—The State Racing Commission has appointed a special committee to study distribution of purses at Maryland race tracks, where parimutuel betting has dipped sharply.

In its annual report to the Governor, the commission noted today that, because of the drop in betting, purses have been slashed. However, it also noted that expenses of horsemen have increased greatly in recent years.

So, it has named a committee to see if some method of purse distribution can be devised so that neither the horseman por the racing associations would have to bear the full brunt of the loss in wagering.

Attorney General Hall Hammond is chairman of the purse committee. Other members are Janon Fisher, jr., secretary of the American Trainers' Association; Edward O'Hara, secretary and manager of Bowie and Marlboro; John O. Needles, secretary and manager of Pimlico and Laurel, and John Manfuso, president of the Horsemen's Benevolent Protective Association.

Yankees Drop 5 Farm Teams, Now Have 15 Clubs

New York, Dec. 30 (AP).—The New York Yankees announced today they have lopped five clubs from their minor league farm system which now numbers 15.

The new setup does not include Newark of the International League. The Bears are up for sale to the Chicago Cubs, who have an option until January 15. Apparently, Yankee officials feel the deal will go through since Newark is not included in their 1950 plans.

Other clubs to be dropped are Augusta, Ga., of the Sally League; Manchester, Vt., New England League; Victoria, British Columbia, Western International League; and Ventura, Calif., California State League.

McCraw Threat to Hoyas

Lynchburg Boy Texas Western Star

210-Pound Fullback Switched From VPI

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

El Paso, Tex., Dec. 30.—A Lynchburg (Va.) lad who originally went to VPI because it was nearby, currently is a backfield star at Texas Western, more than 2000 miles from his home town.

Cordell McCraw, 6-foot-1, 210-pound fullback, is expected to give Georgetown a hard time in Monday's Sun Bowl game.

McCraw played varsity ball as a VPI freshman. Last season he had to remain idle while he established a year's residence at this El Paso branch of the University of Texas.

Rugged Mac was the victim of a freak accident this season and missed the greater part of five games. McCraw broke a small bone in his foot on an end run against Arizona and not an enemy tackler was near.

"The doctor tells me it was almost unbelievable," McCraw said. "I certainly was surprised. The foot aches a lot but they tell me it will for some time."

Aching foot and all, McCraw made his presence felt against West Virginia at Morgantown in a 13-13 tie this fall. He picked up more than 100 yards and most of it was registered in the first half when Texas Western took a 13-0 lead.

McCraw said he's ready—and eager—to play against Georgetown. "That tie with West Virginia did us more good than any game we won." McCraw explained, "It would mean a lot to us to beat Georgetown. You know it's hard for these little Western schools to get any kind of a football name."

McCraw has accounted for his share of Texas Western's yardage, highest in the Nation for the second successive year. In 60 carries, McCraw has picked up 331 yards for a neat 5.5 average.

Back at Lynchburg, McCraw was an outstanding tailback and twice All State at E. C. Glass High. He went to Augusta Military Academy, then went to VPI after glancing over 19 scholarship offers.

Jimmy Kitts then was coaching VPI. He now manages Texas Western's Student Union Building, and is out of sports.

But McCraw followed Kitts to El Paso, securing a scholarship to Texas Western through Kitts.

He drove out here, too, from Lynchburg in a 1927 Model A Ford. It's just three years younger than McCraw. McCraw is quite happy at the picturesque Texas Western school.

He Gained 100 Yards Against W. Virginia

"I like it fine out here and I like the people. I guess it's the people who make it so pleasant," he says.

McCraw is engaged to a local girl, June Case, and hopes to get married and take her back to Virginia after he is graduated.

IN SHORT—At the moment, the Georgetown boys look more Western than Texas Western. They've been going to practice attired in the cowboy garb they were given yesterday . . . Jim Ricca, 235-pound tackle, could be honorary sheriff for any of these honorary posses . . . Gus Fornaciari, soph end, is down with a cold . . . The rest of the boys are in good shape and are going through two practice sessions daily.

three coaches. It came as a complete surprise to academy personnel.

As director of athletics, Caldwell is chairman of the executive committee of the Academy Athletic Association. Capt. Robert B. Pirie is another members of virtue of his post as commandant of midshipmen.

Caldwell's brief statement said Sauer stepped out "when the executive committee of the Naval Academy Athletic Association decided not to renew the contracts of two of Sauer's assistants." It identified the aides as Ignalls and Bradford.

Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., academy superintendent, approved the committee's action, Caldwell said.

Sauer said he decided to leave because he thought "it was the thing to do" after the committee acted.

The announcement came a month after Navy closed its season with a 38-0 shellacking at the hands of Army. The Midshipmen previously had defeated Princeton, Duke and Columbia, deadlocked Tulane and lost to Southern California, Wisconsin, Penn and Notre Dame.

Tars Shocked Army

In 1948, Sauer's first year, Navy bowed to its first eight opponents, then shocked heavily favored Army with a 21-21 stalemate.

Both Bradford and Ingalls agreed with Sauer that Navy "is on the way up."

All three coaches had spent several weeks before Christmas speaking at high school football banquets.

Bradford said the executive committee action "was quite unexpected to me—not much of a Christmas present."

But he called the academy "a nice place" and said he would have liked to stay.

"The material is getting a little better," he added. "We felt pretty good about this past season. We tried hard here."

The academy also is "a mighty fine institution" to Ingalls.

He and Bradford both said they wish to remain associated with Sauer.

Sauer "to Just Relax"

So abruptly did the situation arise, Sauer said for the moment he wants "to just relax a bit." But he will attend a meeting of the American Football Coaches Association in New York next month.

Two other football lieutenants, Assistant Coach Ray Swartz and End Coach Ben Martin, were not affected by the committee action or Sauer's decision.

Swartz, who concentrated on linemen, is Navy's head wrestling coach. Martin was a war-time Navy football star who coached the Plebe eleven in Sauer's first year with the Varsity.

Sauer also began his coaching career with a freshman team. He took over Nebraska's Frosh after his graduation from the institution in 1934. Later he played two seasons as a halfback with the Professional Green Bay Packers. In 1937 he became head coach at the University of New Hampshire. He stayed there until the war drew him into the Navy.

Ingalls was center on Michigan's strong 1939-40-41 teams. He also played a season with the Green Bay Packers before joining the Army Air Force.

Bradford quarterbacked Alabama's 1937 team which went to the Rose Bowl. He served on the Alabama coaching staff, then turned to professional baseball. He joined Sauer after the war.

DEAR FOLKS:

When Alfred G. Vanderbilt deserted California racing for Florida he didn't do it half way. He shipped 24 horses South and fans should see much of his famous cerise and white diamond colors during the Hialeah meeting. Loser Weeper, one of his biggest stake winners of 1949 ,will be send after two $10,000 races to be run over the turf course. While the son of Discovery has yet to perform on the grass, Trainer Bill Winfrey believes the chestnut will do well. First Glance, a full brother of Main Chance's Knockdown, is expected to be prominent in the 3-year-old ranks. He beat The Diver as a juvenile. Vanderbilt has a good prospect in Shock by Bull Lea This colt went wrong last August but is reported fit now. Stone Age, Newsweekly and Foreign Affairs, the latter the Maryland Futurity winner, are rounding into form.—BILL.

St. Joseph's Wins Title

Gene D'Ambrosio's 19 points paced St. Joseph's to a 40-24 win over St. Teresa's in the championship game of the junior CYO Christmas basketball tournament last night at St. John's High School gym.

That gave Gene a total of 91 points in four tournament games, a new record. He was awarded a trophy as the outstanding player of the tournament.

The tournament's All-Star team, announced last night, gives the champion St. Joseph's team two positions, at center and guard. The center is D'Ambrosio and the guard is Jim Bennett. Ed Burch of St. Teresa's is the other guard. The two forwards are Bill Russell of St. Gabriel's and Dick Dent of St. Thomas.

In a preliminary, Holy Comforter defeated St. Dominic's 27-22, for third place.

Arkansas Asks New Hearing On Censure for Rough Play

Dallas, Dec. 30 (AP).—The University of Arkansas has asked a new hearing on its censure by the Southwest Conference for rough football, and at the same time has urged an investigation of all Southwest Conference football for the past two years.

Declaring "We have no desire to defend or cover up a wrong which has been conclusively proved, nor do we wish to be the 'whipped boy' . . .," the board of trustees of Arkansas filed the request with the faculty committee, governing body of the conference.

Procedure in the action of the conference was questioned by the board of trustees which said that it felt the action was in undue haste and without proper consideration of all implications.

The request was sent out December 21 but was not revealed until today by James H. Stewart, executive secretary of the conference upon whose recommendation the censure of Arkansas was voted by the faculty committee in its winter meeting here December 10.

At that time the committee upheld the protest of Dutch Meyer, coach of Texas Christian University, who claimed Arkansas used illegal and crippling tactics in its game with TCU last fall. He pointed to an injury list, said "my kids were butchered" and declared motion pictures of the game showed few legal plays run by Arkansas throughout the contest.

At the same time that Stewart announced the request for a reopening of the case and a new hearing, he also announced that Dean Robert A. Leflar of the Arkansas University Law School had resigned as president of the Southwest Conference because he had become an associate justice of the Arkansas Supreme Court.

Thus, D. W. Williams, vice-chancellor of Texas A. and M. College and vice president of the conference, becomes acting president.

Mulloy Wins Bowl Tennis

New Orleans, Dec. 30 (AP).—Top-seeded Gardnar Mulloy won the Sugar Bowl Tennis tournament here today, defeating Herbert Flam 9—7, 0—6, 6—1, 7—5.

It was Mulloy's first singles championship in seven Sugar Bowl tournaments.

A pair of San Francisco players, Earl Cochell and Arthur Larsen, held a 2-1 lead in sets over Dick Savitt and Tony Trabert in the doubles final when darkness forced postponement until tomorrow morning.

The Cochell-Larsen team was top-seeded.

Fireman Saves Foggy Bottom

Foggy Bottom called on a 34-year old fireman to give it a 45-39 victory over Hine and the D. C. Recreation Basketball championship last night at Coolidge High gym.

One of the slickest players in Washington independent basketball circles for 15 years, balding Acky Viana scored 14 points to help Foggy Bottom protect its 20-10 halftime lead.

Billy Hibbs, 19-year old Wilson Teachers College freshman, tried vainly to keep Hine in contention with 22 points, most of them coming on long set shots.

LOOK FORWARD TO 1950 AND BACK ACROSS THE HALF-CENTURY WITH THE WASHINGTON POST

January, first month of the new year, was named for Janus, the two-faced god of gates, who could look both ways at once. And what better time could there be for you to "look both ways" than on January 1, 1950?

Enjoy that double view tomorrow in The Sunday Washington Post. The special mid-century edition rolls out in panoramic form every phase of the past fifty years. And it looks ahead to 2000 A.D., with predictions of the changes to come.

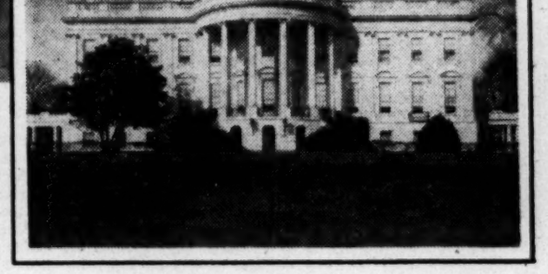
No half century in history has been so eventful as the one just completed. None has held such promise as the one we face. Read the exciting story of both in tomorrow's Sunday Washington Post.

Don't miss these interesting articles . . .

LABOR'S HALF CENTURY. Who is labor's outstanding man of the past fifty years? Samuel Gompers, founder of the powerful American Federation of Labor, or John L. Lewis, today's dominant figure? Post reporter Sam Stavisky ventures an opinion, then gives his reason as he chronicles the labor movement's growth since the turn of the century. Stavisky points out the importance of the almost-forgotten NRA Blue Eagle and its successor, the Wagner Act. His article shows clearly how the American worker has gained tremendously in strength through organization.

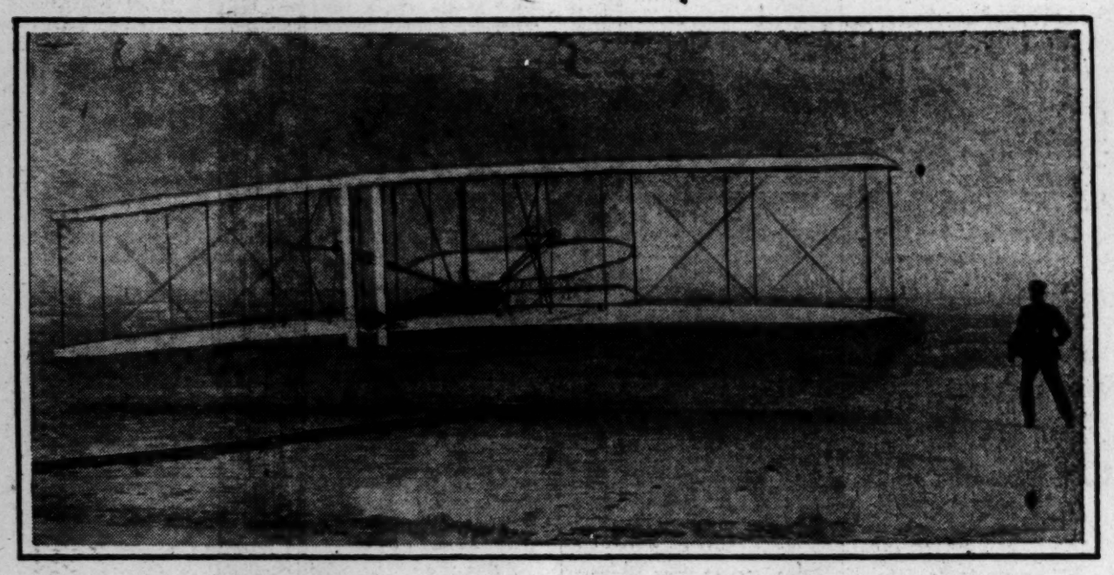
FIFTY YEARS OF AMERICAN DRAMA. The American theater has gone from flesh to shadow in the past half century, declares Richard L. Coe. His Sunday article pictures our transition in mass entertainment media from the live stage to the movies, to television.

A HALF CENTURY OF AMERICAN LITERATURE. In 1900 Americans were reading "hayseed" fiction — books with a rural flavor. Jack London, Upton Sinclair and John Steinbeck have been other landmarks in our literary tastes since then. Lee Grove gives you this phase of our 50-year history.



FIFTY YEARS IN THE WHITE HOUSE. During President McKinley's administration, Colonel Bingham laid plans for making the White House over into an Old World Castle, with towers, statues and conservatories. The executive mansion escaped that fate and many another proposal for its alteration, but it has undergone quite a bit of revamping in the past half century. Almost every President asked for more room—not unreasonably, for the staff has grown from 22 to 301. Edward T. Folliard, White House reporter, tells how the venerable structure has been "operated on" by its various occupants since 1900.

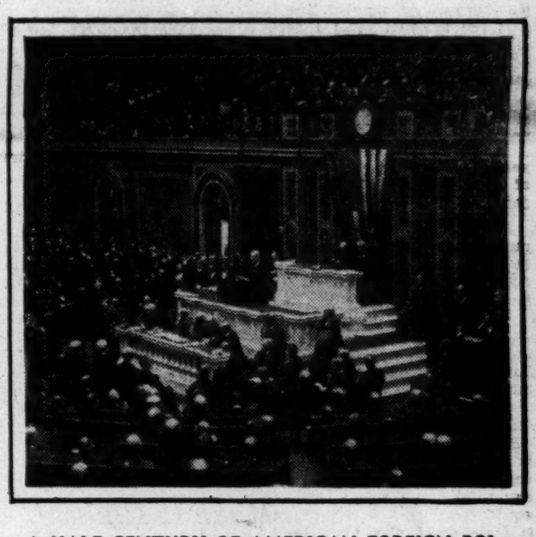
A HALF CENTURY IN AMERICAN AGRICULTURE. Has American agriculture "worked itself out of a job?" Have we improved our farms to such an extent that a food surplus will become one of our permanent problems? John Ball considers that possibility in his report on America's 50-year evolution in agriculture. It started, Ball writes, with a man named Carleton, who increased the wheat yield per acre by 40%. He was followed by such revolutionary items as the Mendelian theory of plant genetics, hybrid corn and agricultural colleges. You'll find the details good reading in this special Sunday Post issue.



FIFTY YEARS IN AVIATION. "An exciting toy" was the word for the Wright brothers' plane back in 1903. The "toy" earned new respect in World War I. Then came the years of thrilling record flights—Lindbergh, Bernt Balchen, Amundson, Byrd and Bennett, Amelia Earhart—and the amazing possibilities of commercial and military flying began to be realized. C. B. Allen, New York Herald Tribune writer, takes you from aviation's birthday up to the faster-than-sound period in an interesting report on man's conquest of the air.

A HALF CENTURY IN AMERICAN SCIENCE. Time was when Newtonian mechanics seemed to solve every scientific problem—then came Einstein, the quantum theory, and 40 years later—for better or worse—this atom age of ours. Alfred Friendly looks back over science's advance in the mid-century edition.

A HALF CENTURY OF AMERICAN MEDICINE. 50 years ago the average American man could expect to die at 48. Now his life expectancy is 65, thanks to such medical steps forward as X-ray, blood therapy, the sulfa drugs and penicillin. Medicine's "Golden Age" is traced in The Sunday Post by Nate Haseltine.



A HALF CENTURY OF AMERICAN FOREIGN POLICY. 50 years ago an immature U. S. was cheering our "power" in quelling the Chinese Boxer Rebellion. How we reached true world stature via Teddy Roosevelt's "Big Stick" policy, two world wars and the gradual defeat of isolationism is told by Ferdinand Kuhn.

FIFTY YEARS IN CONGRESS. We had a lot of internal growing to do, too. The record of 24 Congresses, our progress from trust-busting and the Square Deal through the New Deal and the Fair Deal reflects a complete change in national attitude. Capitol Hill reporter Robert Albright gives the account.

The progress of our Army and Navy during the past half century is described separately by Marshall Andrews and John G. Norris. Edward Ryan covers changes in District of Columbia government; Elsie Carper writes about D. C. education. FCC Chairman Wayne Coy outlines developments in communication.

Jerry Kluttz discusses the government workers' half century. Shirley Povich reviews sports and Conrad Harness looks at the record in local real estate. Peggy Preston chronicles "A Half Century of Washington Society." Arthur Schlesinger lists "The Ten World-Shaking Events of the Half Century."

PARADE BRINGS YOU 1900-1950 IN PICTURES

Remember the San Francisco earthquake, Lindbergh's flight, the burning of the dirigible Hindenburg . . . all the other milestones that marked those vivid five decades? Parade picture magazine brings them to life again in a two-page photo-feature "The Camera Looks Back."

Elsewhere in Parade's mid-century issue you'll like the picture story of Joe Masek, a "happy man" of 50 . . . "Grandpa Was Wrong About 1950" . . . and "My, How Women Have Changed!"

Parade turns toward the future, too, with "Americans Look Ahead," "Youth Explores Tomorrow," and "How Will We Live in 2000?" Even comedian Bob Hope gets into the act with a whole page of resolutions for the next 50 years.

10,000 U. S. Employes Get Longevity Raises Under New Pay Act

Upward of 10,000 Federal workers will get longevity pay raises retroactive to October 30 under regulations issued yesterday by the Civil Service Commission. The above-the-maximum grade boosts were authorized in the new Pay-Reclassification Act.

The exact number of employes who are in "dead-end" jobs and who will get the additional pay increases isn't known. But eventually it's certain that tens of thousands of employes will get them. Civil Service estimates there are 80,000 classified people now at the maximum salary rates of their grades. Between 1 and 2 percent of that number are believed eligible for immediate increases.

Treasury has 1700 employes who will get the raises as of October 30, or nearly 2 percent of its classified staff. It's the only agency that has made a precise report to the Civil Service Commission. The highlights of the commission's regulations governing the new increases follow:

To be eligible, an employe must be in either of the first 10 GS grades or in any CPC grade; he must have completed at least 10 years of service in his present or in an equivalent or higher grade, and he must have completed at least three years of service (within the 10 years) at the maximum of his grade to get a one-step increase; six years to get a two-step boost, and nine years to get the maximum allowance, a three-step raise.

Service does not need to be continuous in computing a 10-year period. Intervening military service will count toward the 10 years, provided the veteran was restored to his job less than 120 days after he was discharged. Up to 30 days without pay can be counted as "continuous" service, but where there is a longer break a new three-year period must be started.

In addition to the time requirements, an employe otherwise eligible must have a good or better efficiency rating and his agency must certify his service and conduct as satisfactory.

It's highly doubtful if the 25,000 employes who are to be brought in under the Classification Act within the next several months will be eligible for longevity boosts—unless their agencies grant them on their own authority in the meantime. Employes of Federal Housing, Reconstruction Finance, Displaced Persons, Export-Import Bank and many others are involved. The regulations appear to provide that the three-year requirement at the maximum of the grade must be in a classified job.

Longevity step increases will range from $60 in CPC-1 and $80 in GS-1 to $125 in CPC-10 and GS-10. A raise of $375 annually is the maximum.

Civil Service announced that an equivalent or higher grade under the 10-year provision would be determined by the following table:

CPC-1, 2 and 3 is equivalent to GS-1. CPC-4 is equivalent to GS-2. CPC-5 is equivalent to GS3. CPC-6 is equivalent to GS-4. CPC-7 is equivalent to GS-5. CPC-8 is equivalent to GS-6. CPC-9 is equivalent to GS-7, and CPC-10 is equivalent to GS-8.

Also, GS-1 is equivalent to old grade SP-1 and 2 and CAF-1. GS-2 is equivalent to CAF-2 and SP-3; GS3 is equivalent to CAF-3 and SP-4; GS-4 is equivalent to CAF-4 and SP-5; GS-5 is equivalent to CAF5, SP-6 and P-1; GS-6 is the equivalent of CAF-6 and SP-7; GS-7 is the equivalent of CAF-7, SP-8 and P-2; GS-8 is the equivalent of CAF-8; GS-9 is the equivalent of CAF-9 and P-3, and GS10 the equivalent of CAF-10.

IN-GRADE RAISES: At the same time, the commission ordered the waiting periods for automatic in-grade raises changed from 12 and 18 months to 52 and 78 calendar weeks, respectively. This means that the raises hereafter will be put into effect within a day or so after the employes become eligible for them.

Another change allows employes to be in a nonpay status for as long as 52 weeks without losing credit toward in-grade raises which had accumulated before the absence began.

Bolivian Pilot Sued For $500,000 By Airline

Eastern Blames Bridoux for Crash Here on Nov. 1 When 55 Died

Eastern Air Lines, Inc., sued Bolivian Capt. Erick Rios Bridoux for $500,000 yesterday and charged he caused the November 1 airplane catastrophe near National Airport in which 55 persons lost their lives.

The District Court suit accused the South American pilot of "carelessness, recklessness and negligence."

Previously, Bridoux, sole survivor of the midair crash of his P-38 pursuit ship and the airline's DC-4, told reporters that he felt "no responsibility whatever."

The suit was for damages solely for the airlines and its equipment and did not mention the 51 passengers and four crew members who died. However, if EAL prevails in the suit, this would prove strong support in EAL's favor should the passengers' heirs bring suit against it.

In the court action, EAL denied that it "caused or contributed to" the collision. Both ships were coming in for a landing when it occurred.

Bridoux suffered back injuries and lacerations in the crash. The Civil Aeronautics Board hearings into the accident adjourned November 14 with the expectancy that Bridoux would present his version of the collision upon his recovery.

Three Convicts Are Captured; All Four Back

Media, Pa., Dec. 30 (U.P.).—A shiny sedan plus a ragged, unshaven appearance today proved the undoing of three long-term convicts who escaped from the Virginia State prison camp at Haymarket on Christmas Day.

An alert State policeman halted the fugitives when they passed him on a highway near here in a brand-new automobile. They were dirty and badly in need of shaves.

The trio, taken to the Avondale Pa., State police barracks, were identified as Roy E. Bennett, 26, of Norfolk, Va., and John Aldrich, 27, and Will D. Beasley, 24, both of Norfolk, Va. All were serving long sentences for robbery.

The fugitives were held pending the arrival of Virginia authorities.

A fourth man who escaped with them—Walter M. Barnett—was captured on a Washington street Wednesday.

Women Win 1, Lose 1, to Purse Thieves

Purse [illegible]ers plied their trade on two women in opposite sections of the city last night but gained only a .500 batting average.

Mrs. Robert J. Mills, [illegible], of 121 5th st. se., foiled two thieves who tried to grab her purse at about 8:30 p. m. at 5th and B sts. se., a half a block from her home.

Mrs. Mills, a clerk in a dry-cleaning establishment, told police one fo the men grabbed her purse but she [illegible] it back, screamed and fled. She had only $2 in the purse.

Mrs. Mills said both men were Negroes. One, she said, was about 30 years old, 5 feet 8 inches, of slender build and wearing a hat and overcoat. The other she described as about 5 feet 10, wearing a short jacket and dark clothes.

Less fortunate was Mrs. Seymour Reissman, 25, a Civil Service Commission statistical clerk, of 2801 15th st. nw.

At about 8:40 p. m., on Belmont st. nw., between 14th and 15th sts., she was grabbed from behind by a man and thrown to the ground. The thief escaped with her purse containing $88.

Mrs. Reissman described the man as a medium brown-skinned Negro about 5 feet 6 inches, of slender build, wearing a hat and long coat.

Half-Century in Retrospect

Red-Head Started Printer on GPO Career January 1, 1900; Dr. John C. Ball, Pastor Emeritus, Ordained 50 Years Ago

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

If it hadn't been for a red-head with a bad reputation, 87-year-old James H. Galbreath would probably still be in Akron, Ohio, he confided yesterday.

Instead, because of the red-head, he came to Washington and took a job with the Government Printing Office on January 1, 1900—50 years ago tomorrow.

He retired on January 1, 1930, but still attends meetings of Printing Pressmen's Local No. 1 (AFL), of which he is the oldest member, and he still visits the GPO fairly frequently.

But about the red-head. Though he can still remember her, having a keen memory, he was never involved with the lady.

Sat Down When Girl Danced

It was the assistant foreman of the printing shop in Akron where Galbreath worked who was a friend of this red-head.

"We were having a dance at the time and the boys in the shop were pretty sure Matt, the assistant foreman, planned to bring this red-head, who had been thrown out of all the hotels there," Galbreath recalled with amusement yesterday. "She was his girl."

"Matt was a pretty good friend of mine, and the boys asked me to speak to him about this girl," he said. "I did, but he brought her anyway. Wher they came in, my wife and I and some other couples sat down, and there was no one for Matt and his girl to dance the quadrille with, so they left."

Got Away From Former Friend

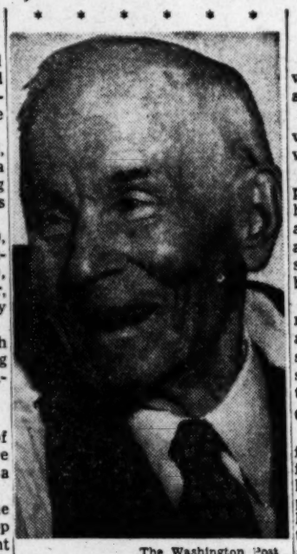
The next day, Matt tried unsuccessfully to get Galbreath fired. Shortly afterward, Matt became foreman of the shop, and from then on Galbreath couldn't wait to get out of the printing shop, to get away from his former friend's rough treatment.

"At that time, a job with the Printing Office here was one of the best-paying jobs in the country," Galbreath said yesterday at his home, 20 K st. nw. "It was $4 a day, 30 days' leave, and pay for all the holidays. I reported in on New Year's Day, and though I didn't have to work that day, I got paid for it. That really surprised me."

The increase in crime here—"burglaries, safe-crackings, pocketbook snatchings, rapes, never heard of such things when I first came here"—has made the greatest impression on the spry, keen, retired pressman.

Fought Off Burglar in Home

And well it might, for his son, Albert, was shot and killed by a lunchroom proprietor in 1931, during a minor argument. Then, three years ago, Galbreath fought off a burglar in the dead of night until his nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Husbands, who live with him, woke up and pitched in to hold the intruder for the police.



The Washington Post
JAMES H. GALBREATH
"I eat everything"

Again, two years ago Galbreath was yoked and robbed at K st. and New Jersey ave. nw., and last August, while an innocent bystander during the robbery of a peanut vendor, he was struck several times on the head by the vendor as he wielded his cane at the robber.

Galbreath boasts that he hasn't had a doctor in 60 years for any illness. He doesn't know why he's been so healthy.

Eats, Drinks, Smokes "Everything"

"I eat everything, drink everything, and smoke everything," he declares. Besides having been a union member for 60 years, he has belonged to Elks Lodge No. 15 here more than 46 years and is a life member of Dawson Masonic Lodge No. 16.

Galbreath has been dubbed the "Mayor of Swampoodle" as his section is known, by Public Printer John J. Deviny, a good friend of his whom he sees on his visits to the GPO.

Galbreath, whose wife died in 1934, has one living son, William, 65, a pressman at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, a granddaughter, Mrs. William James Gessford, jr., and a 2-year-old great-grandson, of Kirkwood dr., Hyattsville, Md.

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Dr. John Compton Ball is a man who likes his neckties four-in-hand, and flowing.

He likes the sunlight casting its warm glow through his apartment windows all day long.

He likes to look at the Metropolitan Baptist Church, which he helped to build, and from his apartment window he can see it across the street at 6th and A sts. ne. He can see the education building now going up next door.

And although he's 86 years old now, and preaches only occasionally at the church across the street, he still likes to "make a sale"—"sell the Lord Jesus into the hearts and lives of men."

Ordained 50 Years Ago

Dr. Ball was ordained shortly before the start of the century, and for most of his career (since 1903) had been affiliated with the Metropolitan Baptist Church. In 1944, he asked to be made pastor emeritus, and that is his present title, although he preaches "when I want to" and helps in other services.

And he still marries those who come to him. "There are folks in that church that I carried in my arms as babies. I'm marrying my second generation now. If I live another five years, I'll marry the third generation," he said.

Any pastor has his favorite stories about marrying people. Dr. Ball remembers his largest "fee"—$50 from a Congressman whose name he doesn't remember—his smallest "fee," the words "Thank You" written on tissue paper placed in an envelope and pressed in his hand by a young and very unwealthy bridegroom.

Perennial Marriage "Fee"

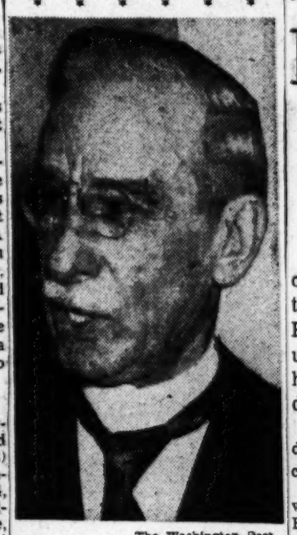
But his most unusual marrying story is still going on. About 13 years ago, Dr. Ball married a couple, and after the ceremony, the groom said, "You've married me to the finest woman in the world. Here's $5, and I shall give you $5 more for each year you live."

Nothing, Dr. Ball said, happened for 10 years. The none day his doorbell was pulled vigorously, and a strange (he thought) man stood there. It was the 10-year-old bridegroom, with $50—$5 for each year of his married life.

No explanations. No speech. Just $50.

Last week, the 13-year-old bridegroom came again, "to pay up" as he explained it.

"If all the couples I had married gave me fees like that," Dr. Ball said, "I'd make a bigger salary than the President of the United States." He estimates he must have performed at least four thousand marriage ceremonies during his ministry.



The Washington Post
DR. JOHN C. BALL
"Sell the Lord Jesus . . ."

Like most ministers, Dr. Ball turned his marriage money over to his wife. Mrs. Ball, whom he himself calls "the best woman in the world" died 24 years ago. The minister never remarried.

Mrs. Ball had a part in Dr. Ball's selection of his religious denomination, also. "My wife," he said, "was a stanch Baptist. I was sprinkled in the Episcopal Church, confirmed in the German Reform Church, and then, when I came to my senses, I was immersed in the Baptist Church. If those things open the door to heaven, I'll get there."

Dr. Ball is an Englishman (born in Northamptonshire) and traces of his native accent still cling—as when he tells how he was studying for the ministry, and making a net salary of $2.50 a week by conducting a mission. His wife helped out by making $1 a day hemming embroidered napkins.

"In Clover" at $15 a Week

"We were really in clover," he said, "when I started taking vacant pulpits and made anywhere from $15 to $20 a week."

Dr. Ball is called the "dean of the Baptist denomination," partly because he is believed to be the oldest pastor still in the service; and partly for his work with the Metropolitan Church, whose membership increased from 361 in 1903, when he became pastor, to 3280, when he retired and became pastor emeritus in 1944.

Numbers Raid Nets Woman And Two Men

Three persons were arrested yesterday afternoon by the police vice squad following a raid at 309 C st. ne. The three were charged with operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips.

Police said they entered the place on a warrant, and found marked money spent by undercover men, as well as numbers slips. They arrested Mrs. Ella L. Knox, 49, who lives at the address, and Roland Dyson, 49, of 1116 Neal st. ne.

A few moments later, on another warrant, they picked up James Jesse Lawson, 29, a cab driver, of 143 47th st. ne., in the 300 block of D st. ne. The policemen said Lawson, who had been under observation for some time, had a paper bag on the back seat of his cab containing money and numbers slips.

Lawson denied any knowledge of how the bag got there.

The trio was arranged before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, and their cases continued to January 4. Bond was set at $1500 on Mrs. Knox and Lawson, and $1000 on Dyson.

Young Gunman Hunted in Gas Station Holdup

A young man, armed with an automatic, held up a filling station attendant last night after apparently "casing" another station and abandoning it as a prospect because too many persons were at work.

Victim was Charles Greer of 112 4th st. se., who was working in a station at 101 Florida ave. ne. The bandit, described as white, 25 to 30, 160 pounds, light hair, took $60 to $75 in bills from Greer. He fled in an auto, Greer told police.

A short time earlier, according to Thomas A. Murphy, the same man entered the station at North Capitol st. and Florida ave., where Murphy is an attendant, but drove off when he saw a half dozen attendants. Police said Greer was alone.

Arlington Resident Slugged and Robbed

Jay Zirkle of 729 N. Vermont st., Arlington, was held up, slugged and robbed of $46 last night around 8:45 p.m. while walking along Glebe rd., near the intersection of Carlin Spring rd., police reported.

Pvt. J. R. Mullins said Zirkle's assailant leaped from a parked car, hit him with a blunt instrument, knocking him to the ground, and took his wallet from an inside pocket. Zirkle said the bandit made his getaway in a 1940 car. He was treated at Arlington Hospital and released.

structing the scene in the Freedmens delivery room on January 1, 1900.

"The room was in one of the four Army barracks which made up the hospital then," he said, "on the site of what is now Howard University Medical School.

Primitive in Those Days

"Things were pretty primitive in those days," he said, looking at wrinkled hands that have slapped "the Lord knows how many" babies to life.

"We thought little of the sterilization of today. There were basins of hot water and soap where we scrubbed. We had only a red bandana nurse to help us, and generally a student to watch."

"We called them red bandana nurses because they always wore red bandanas to keep their hair up. They weren't nurses really; they had no training. I guess you would call them midwives. But they delivered an awful lot of babies."

Dr. Warfield delivered his first child in 1894, as an interne. In this position for five years he received no salary. For the next two years, he said, he received occasional "presents" from the superintendent, and later $10 a month.

In 1901 he was promoted from interne to superintendent.

The job brought a $2380-a-year salary boost, but with the raise came new headaches, for the job called for him to combine the duties of administrator and chief surgeon.

For 35 years he held the job and watched and supervised construction in 1908 of the present facilities at 6th and Bryant sts. nw., plus many of the improvements since that date. When he retired in 1936 at the age of 70, his was described as "a brilliant medical career" by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

"He's a better doctor than I was."

Dr. Warfield's struggles to convert himself from a Hyattstown, Montgomery County, Md., farmer's boy to a Washington doctor is a case history of perseverance.

When he came to Washington, he said yesterday, "I could plant more tobacco than you could shake a stick at and I could plow as straight a furrow as anyone."

But he worked as a bellboy at "the old Hamilton House" at 14th and K st. nw. to pay his way through Centenary Biblical Institute, now Morgan College. In 1891 he graduated and entered Howard University Medical School.

With their medical degrees, Dr. Warfield and a fellow student left for Columbus, Ohio, to open offices.

"But my money ran out after a few months," the doctor reminisced with a smile, "and I had to come home. I had helped a fellow open a barbershop in Atlantic City when I was in medical school, and in return he was going to help me get started. But he went broke at the wrong time.

"I had a good friend who was a porter on the Pullman from Columbus to Baltimore, and I needed him bad because I had only $2.50 to my name.

"I had to give the porter $2, because he said he couldn't fix the conductors from Cumberland to Washington."

Took Job as Waiter

In Washington with 50 cents, Dr. Warfield was forced to give up any idea of practicing medicine and took a job as a waiter at Cabin John Bridge."

There he heard the superintendent of Freedmen's was looking for an interne. Dr. Warfield figured he was an interne looking for a hospital.

Despite a life of hard work, Dr. Warfield looks many years younger than his 83 years. He accredits his good health to 'regular habits."

"I didn't spin the night out, ever."

Two Motorists Acquitted In Prince Georges Death

Two motorists were acquitted in Upper Marlboro Police Court yesterday of manslaughter charges arising from a three-car collision in which an Air Force corporal died December 15.

Technical Sergt. Clyde Gossage, 30, of Bolling Air Force Base, and Carson Chapman, 24, a truck driver, of 411 L st., se., also were found innocent of technical reckless driving charges placed by Prince Georges County police following the accident on Military hwy. about a mile east of Suitland, Md.

Head Injuries Fatal

Victim of the crash was Air Force Corpl. Lloyd Stacey, attached to Andrews Air Force Base, who died of head injuries after his automobile collided with vehicles operated by both Gossage and Chapman. He had been married only a week before the collision.

According to testimony before Judge Alan Bowie, Stacey's auto struck the left rear fender of Gossage's auto while attempting to pass and then careened into the right front of the oncoming truck operated by Chapman. Gossage's bantam-type sedan was hurtled down a 30-foot embankment and the front wheel assembly of the heavy gravel truck was torn off by the impact, the two drivers testified.

Acquits Both Drivers

Judge Bowie interrupted the hearing to acquit both drivers on the ground there was no evidence of negligence on their part.

Assistant State's Attorney Hervey G. Machen, jr., first asked that the case be continued due to the illness of one of two investigating policemen, but then agreed to an immediate hearing when he learned that Gossage would be unable to reenlist in the Air Force until the charges against him were cleared. Gossage's present enlistment expires January 8.

Officer Says He Was Hit By Driver Avoiding Arrest

An off-duty Hyattsville policeman suffered painful head injuries early yesterday when he was assaulted by a motorist whom he attempted to arrest for a traffic violation.

Pvt. Thomas Bladen, 32, 4801 48th ave., Edmonston, was treated at Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, for scalp injuries he reported were inflicted by a man who struck him over the head with a flashlight after first trying unsuccessfully to run over him.

Follows Motorist in Own Car

Bladen, driving his own auto, reported the motorist "cut him off" sharply on Baltimore blvd. in Hyattsville around 1 a. m. The officer said he pursued the man about a mile to Berwyn, where he forced the other car to the curb and identified himself as a policeman.

As he stood in front fo the other automobile to note the license number, the officer said, the driver put the car in gear and lunged at him. Bladen said he twisted away and rolled into a ditch, and as he came to his feet the irate motorist rushed from the car and struck the policeman with a heavy flashlight.

His assailant drove away, Bladen reported, when he returned to his own automobile and asked his wife to hand him his service revolver, which he kept in the glove compartment of the car. Prince Georges County police, who arrived a few minutes later in response to a call from the operator of a nearby filling station, took Bladen to the hospital, where two stitches were required to close a wound in his scalp.

Bladen described his assailant as a white man about 35 years of age, of medium height and build. He was driving a black sedan bearing Rhode Island tags, the report said.

The old cases are listed annually at the court. Notice that the indicted criminals are wanted is given to both the United States Marshal's office and the Police Department.

Slim Evidence

It is acknowledged by prosecutors that in some of the earlier cases, the evidence today would probably be too slim to support a conviction. However, since the suspects were indicted in time, there is no statute of limitations to bar prosecution in any of the cases.

In all of them, court clerks said they have received no notice that the persons wanted are either under arrest, are insane or dead. The cases are listed as:

Firemen Praised

Fire Damages JohnsHopkins Lab Annex

Fire threatened the Johns Hopkins University Applied Physics Laboratory, 8621 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, early yesterday, but was confined to a one-story annex by prompt action of Montgomery County volunteer firemen.

The blaze, in a wooden and asbestos sheet building in an inner quadrangle, was discovered by a building guard about 3:30 a. m. It was under control within half an hour.

A laboratory spokesman said the building contained a shaker table used to test the durability of objects under examination. This equipment, he said, was unharmed, only the roof and one wall being damaged. The fire's origin was not determined and no estimate of damage was made.

The laboratory was built during World War II and worked with many secret war materials. Presently it is conducting tests in connection with the Navy's guided missile program, the spokesman said.

Efforts of firemen were praised by R. B. Curry, assistant director of the laboratory, who declared, "their fast appearance and efficient work prevented the fire from spreading beyond the small structure."

The companies and a rescue squad of the Silver Spring department responded along with the Takoma Park Department and Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad.

Aid to Needy In Maryland Boosted in 1949

Baltimore, Dec. 30 (AP).—Maryland's public assistance to its needy and other welfare services expanded considerably during 1949, J. Milton Patterson reported today.

Summarizing activities of his department during the past year, the State welfare director noted that although caseloads increased, Maryland ranks far below other States in the proportion of its population receiving assistance.

But more relief had to be distributed during 1949 for major divisions of the public assistance program.

A "more restricted labor market" was to blame for that, Patteson said. Older and handicapped workers, along with others, found fewer employment opportunities.

The rise in aid to the needy blind and to old folks was slight. During November, 1949, 11,886 persons got old age assistance, 82 persons more than in November, 1948. And 475 sightless received aid last November as compared to 467 for the same month of 1948.

Prince Georges Official Retires After 45 Years

R. Ernest Smith, 71, deputy treasurer of Prince Georges County, yesterday ended 45 years of service to the county.

Smith, oldest county employe in years of service, retired in accordance with provisions of Maryland's State retirement system permitting all State and county employes to retire after reaching the age of 60. The system went into effect in the county for the first time this year.

A native of Upper Marlboro, Smith has served three elected terms as county treasurer under a system which prevents elected officials from succeeding themselves. In between his terms as treasurer he held the appointive post of deputy treasurer.

He is married, the father of three children and has three grandchildren.

Georgians Plan Dance; Celebrities Ball Slated

By Nicha Soure

YOUNG Georgians are taking over the first party of the young year.

The Peach Staters are planning for the January 7 dance in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. The party will feature a musical program at 9 p. m. to be be succeeded by dancing at 10 p. m.

Wisner Ray is chairman of the dance committee. For those who would rather play cards, games will be a part of the program. Mrs. E. B. Jackson (Ordway 7908) and Mrs. Hugh Peterson (Adams 2673) are in charge of the games.

INDIANA is starting off the New Year with a Celebrities Ball on January 6.

The ball, which will be held at the Shoreham Hotel, will honor Hoosiers who have achieved national distinction during the past year.

Honored on this occasion will be Lieut. Gen. Willis D. Crittenberger, chairman of the Inter-American Defense Council for North and South American Republics; Justice Sherman Minton of the Supreme Court, and Jack McFall, the new Assistant Secretary of State for Congressional Liaison.

THE Department of Justice officials and employes will be in the spotlight when the New York State Society holds its first dance of 1950 on January 7.

About Budget Party Menu

My club is planning to give a "story book" tea around the first of the year with a list of 200 guests. We have selected one outstanding fairy tale that can be enacted, at intervals, throughout the tea with a minimum of trouble. We will have to budget our purchases so are asking you to give us ideas as to the menu and how to serve it, china and table linen, additional entertainment (if any) or anything embracing an affair of this type.
L. F. B.

With a guest list of 200 you will probably wish to serve a fairly simple menu such as tea and/or coffee, small cakes or cookies, mints and nuts. It would be fun to carry the idea of your story into the refershments and tea table decorations if at all possible. Since you didn't say which story you have chosen, I can't be specific, but to give you an idea what I mean, you could fasten tiny Red Riding Hoods onto toothpicks and stick them into each cup cake. The same motif could be pasted to the corner of plain white tea-sized paper napkins.

The refreshments should be arranged on a table which has been spread with a lace or embroidered cloth. In the center use a bowl of flowers and candles for decoration. At one end place a tea service—silver if you can borrow one—and coffee service at the other end. Along the sides of the table the cakes or cookies, mints and nuts would be arranged upon pretty plates. Two of your members or honored guests should be invited to pour. When the guests receive their cup of tea they will serve themselves directly from the table. Members of the club should be designated to see that the tea table is replenished constantly.

The only china needed is a tea cup and dessert size plate.

Your storybook enactment would be sufficient entertainment, it seems to me.

Can you tell me why meal gets skippers in it and tell me how to prevent it? D. D.

I suspect this is a form of food weevil which infests dry foods—particularly flours, meals, cereals. To prevent them, the infested meal should be thrown away and all other cereal products on your shelves inspected for infestations. Also destroy any other foods which are infested.

Remove all objects from the cupboard shelves, wash them and spray the surface and cracks with 5 percent DDT. Let stand to dry completely before returning food to shelves. As an added precaution it would be wise to store your grain products in tin cans with tight fitting lids. This sort of insect is particularly bothersome in the warm humid months. You should have no trouble in getting rid of them now.

Please advise me on the main features of a "grand opening" of an infant's shop which my husband and I plan to open the middle of January. I would like also some ideas on decorating the shop. I plan to follow a carnival theme by painting tent tops on the wall above the show cases. V. S. T.

A grand opening is an occasion for your friends, business acquaintances, and the general public to come to your new establishment on your invitation to get acquainted with you and the facilities you are offering. You may send printed or engraved invitations to those specific persons you wish to come. The proprietors of your nearby neighborhood businesses should be included on this list.

The general public can be invited by newspaper advertisements, hand bills delivered door to door in the neighborhood, a notice in the new store window.

The opening may be a purely social occasion for an afternoon or evening in advance of doing actual business, or it may last for a complete day or weekend while business is in progress.

If you choose the social form of grand opening you may wish to serve simple refreshments. However, this should not be attempted unless you have the facilities to do it nicely. In lieu of refreshments you could give a balloon to each child to carry out your carnival idea.

Your idea of painting tent tops on the wall above the show cases is good. Use bold colors and keep the designs simple. If you use red and white tent tops, perhaps you could repeat the colors in striped wrapping paper. Lines of circus animals, parade fashion, might be used along the top of a high show case. Carnival colors could be used on hand bills.

I accidentally spilled a little bleach and water solution on a pure silk white blouse and it left a yellow stain. Do you have any idea how to remove this stain? I have used color remover but to no avail. C. G.

I'm sorry to have to tell you that there is no way to restore the spot to its original whiteness. Bleach has a deteriorating effect on silk and the fabric at the damaged spot has been completely changed. Not only that, but the destruction caused by the bleach will soon cause the spot to break. Therefore, my best suggestion is to remove the damaged area and patch it. If this is done with tiny stitches, it will be quite inconspicuous. To get a matching piece for the patch, cut one from the tail of the blouse or an inside seam.

Some time ago you printed directions for storing books and magazines in cartons so that it would not be ruined by dampness or bugs. Will you be kind enough to repeat these directions in the paper? I wish to store some of the books in a closet in the apartment and some in an unheated attic. E. C. F.

Place the books or magazines in tight boxes which have been lined with newspapers. Books with particularly lovely bindings should be wrapped individually in tissue paper. As a precaution against silverfish which eat the starch in bindings, spray cracks in the box with 5 percent D. D. T. oil solution. Allow to dry before placing books in box. When box is full, cover tightly with many thicknesses of newspaper and spray top or place a layer of naphthalene crystals over the top. Tie the box shut and store where it will not be subjected to excessive heat or moisture.

In your column today A. J. wanted to know how to make sea foam candy. I use your recipe with brown sugar and it is delicious. You didn't specify white or brown. Brown sugar is so much better than the granulated. I add black walnut meats. I. M. W.

Sounds delicious! Thank you for suggesting it!

I wish to thank J. H. B. of Arlington, J. N. Q. of Takoma Park, A. M. M. of Alexandria, F. W. B. of Fairlington, and G. M. B. of Branchville, Md., who have sent baby shoe patterns. I have sent D. C. T. who originally requested the pattern a copy and will be glad to send one of the remaining patterns to anyone else who would like it.

In reply to S. C. P. and others I have noticed in your column, The Handicraft Shop at 6228 Georgia ave. nw. is a small shop that sells only hand-made articles and they sell on a commission. J. J.

Thank you for adding this shop to our list of those selling handmade articles.

Attention, C. J. L.: I don't know any Washington source for lingonberry jam, but it can be obtained by mail from Christina, 129 Lexington ave., New York City (16), N. Y. H. M. H.

Thank you for this information!

PETUNIA!

Heavens, what a busy day!
I'm bushed! I'm beat! I'm through!
And—this may sound peculiar—but
My dress is tired, too!

It's a fact, Petunia! Wool and silk dresses DO get tired. And if you'll let a dress rest a few days after one or two days of wear, it will last longer and need less frequent pressings.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

If you have some extra space in a corner of one of your rooms and someone in the house who is handy with tools you can have a "gymnasium" for your 3-year-old

One builds a sturdy platform 2½ or 3 feet above the floor anywhere from 4 to 6 feet square. Two or three broad steps equipped with railings on either side provide entry. The exit is a smoothly polished hardwood board that serves as a slide for the junior athlete. Though not essential, 2 or 3 inch sides on the slide make it seem safer for a timid youngster. And, of course, there should be railings at least waist high around the platform.

Crawlers, toddlers and runabouts will use the "gym" in all sorts of ways. In addition to providing exercise, it serves as a playhouse, an airplane and all sorts of other exciting things. The space beneath the platform makes a wonderful cave for the children or it can be used as storage space for toys and other equipment.

Nation's Foster Mother

Better Life for Children Is Miss Lenroot's Goal

By Genevieve Reynolds

A WHITE-HAIRED maiden lady with deep blue eyes and an understanding smile is this Nation's most vigilant foster mother. She knows the troubles of millions of children and cares about their futures.

So when Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, Chief, U. S. Children's Bureau, Social Security Administration, Federal Security Agency, chalks up 35 years on January 2, she'll still be battling to improve the life of the Nation's and world's children. In playing foster mother to millions, she has preserved the human touch for individuals. Fifteen of the 35 years with the Bureau, she has been its chief.

A daily stream of foreign-born visitors come to her for advice, as well as thousands of Americans. A woman from Java wants to know what this country does in child welfare. A former juvenile court judge in Warsaw wants help in studying services for delinquent children here. And a Swiss worker comes to tell her about a rest home maintained in her country. Then there may be a group of social workers from China, India, Venezuela, Peru or Egypt dropping in for factual information or a chat.

Writes Prolifically

Throughout her tenure of service Miss Lenroot has written numerous pamphlets, speeches and several books on various aspects of child care. And no ghost writer puts words and thoughts under her by-line. She refuses to sign works that she doesn't write herself.

Shortly before Christmas the bureau chief gave her staff time off for shopping. She remained to type personally and mail the pressing, important business letters.

Wisconsin-born Katherine F. Lenroot's career in public life began the year following her graduation from the University of Wisconsin, when she was appointed woman deputy of the Industrial Commission of the State. She started by making cost-of-living surveys in Milwaukee as a basis for carrying out a new minimum wage law there.

After passing a civil service examination, she took a job with the 1-year-old bureau. In 1922 Miss Lenroot became assistant head of the bureau. Then in November, 1934 President Roosevelt appointed her as chief.

Father Was Senator

Public service is an accepted fact in the Lenroot family. Her father, whose parents came from Sweden to settle first in St. Croix Falls, Wis., taught her the ins and outs of government.

Irvine L. Lenroot took his daughter with him onto the floor of the Wisconsin Legislature when she was only 10. Later, when he was United States Representative, then Senator, then Judge of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, the father-and-daughter team frequently conferred on public problems.

This first-hand knowledge of government has stood Miss Lenroot in good stead in her fight to obtain congressional appropriations for the bureau.

As Washington bureaus go—the Children's Bureau is small. Its present staff is approximately 300. But directing its work is no eight-hour-a-day job for its chief. To Miss Lenroot it's a round-the-clock task which she loves. Perhaps that's the principal reason why she's found no time for hobbies.

The bureau's job is to investigate and report on all matters pertaining to the health and welfare of children in the Nation. This also calls for administering 22 million dollars in grants to the States to assist them in the job of looking after the health of children, mending bodies and spirits of crippled children, plus giving a new start in life to children who are dependent, neglected and delinquent. Under Miss Lenroot's guidance the bureau has made great strides in research of child growth and development.

Miss Lenroot believes in spiritual development as well as mental, physical and emotional growth. She thinks the development of each is essential in developing an individual to assume a responsible role in a free, democratic society.

Modest on Achievements

Modest about her honors and achievements, her listings would read like a double page in Who's Who. Her latest was President Truman's appointment to serve as secretary of the Mid-Century White House Conference on Children and Youth, scheduled for December, 1950. Also, she is vice chairman of the Interdepartmental Committee on Children and Youth, formed in 1948 at the suggestion of the President.

Internationally Miss Lenroot also carries large responsibilities. By the appointment of the President she has served since 1947 as the United States member of the Executive Board of the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund. Her work on this committee has taken her twice to Europe. In 1948 she was chairman of the United States delegation to the Ninth Pan American Child Congress in Venezuela. During that conference, she conducted several of the plenary sessions in Spanish, which she speaks fluently.

Last year she received a Doctor of Humane Letters degree from Russell Sage College. In 1949 Tulane gave her an honorary Doctor of Laws degree, which was an addition to the same degree bestowed on her by her alma mater 10 years previously.

Negatives Define A 'Super' Musical

By Richard L. Coe

"ON THE TOWN," at the Palace, is the most enjoyable screen musical comedy I've seen in years.

This frisky adaptation of the 5-year-old stage hit has the sort of tony sophistication, to be rudely blunt, well, that you don't expect to find in screen musicals. And Gene Kelly both heads and co-directs a super-dooper cast.

In praising a screen musical, if you think about it, the nicest things you can say are of a negative nature. This one is NOT about a struggling musician. It has nothing to do with the virtue of yazmataz over the Old Masters. While it is in Technicolor, it has no huge, gudgeously-dressed audiences cheering some nondescript genius. Best of all, Kathryn Grayson, Mario Lanza, Jose Iturbi, Gloria Jean, Dan Dailey, Lauritz Melchoir and S. Z. Sakall are NOT anywhere in sight. Nor do the credit lines make any genuflexions toward Joe Pasternak or George Jessel.

As though these virtues are not enough, M-G-M has tossed in an immensely crisp cast, some amusing songs, touches of satire on a night-club chorus, some stunning views of New York (Technicolor) and as brisk a pace as the Eighth Ave. Express.

The slight story Betty Comden and Adolph Green have adapted from their stage hit follows the line pretty closely. You spend 24 hours' leave with three sailors, watching two of them pick up amusing types and the third fall in love at first sight with "Miss Turnstiles of June."

Kelly, whose easy, tomcat grace must be one of the greatest assets of Mighty Metro, is his wonderful self as the sailor in love. He does several numbers with his pals, including "New York, New York," "Main Street," "A Day in New York Ballet" and "Count on Me," a new addition to the score (possibly replacing the exuberant "Carried Away.")

"ON THE TOWN." M-G-M release produced by Arthur Freed. Screen play by Adolph Green and Betty Comden from their play and Jerome Robbins' ballet, "Fancy Free." Four songs and ballet composed by Leonard Bernstein. Additional lyrics and music by Green, Comden and Roger Edens. Photographed in Technicolor by Harold Rosson. Directed by Gene Kelly and Stanley Donen. At the Palace.

THE CAST

Gabey	Gene Kelly
Chip	Frank Sinatra
Brunhilde Esterhazy	Betty Garrett
Claire Huddesen	Ann Miller
Ozzie	Jules Munshin
Ivy Smith	Vera-Ellen
Mme. Dilyovska	Florence Bates
Lucy Shmeeler	Alice Pearce
Professor	George Meader

Alice Pearce Scores

Vera-Ellen is his likable "Miss Turnstiles," pert, fresh and more of a dancer than the screen's recent tootsies.

Frank Sinatra has several songs, but he's developed a neat comedy style, a dazed little guy especially captivating with his gal in "Come Up to My Place."

Betty Garrett is Frank's gal and her amorous taxi driver is a cheerful delight.

Jules Munshin, plug-ugly of the gobs, has a Harold Lloyd sequence that will make you laugh, and he prances nobly.

Ann Miller finally comes into a good role and makes much of the rich, intellectual young lady who finds in Julie "My Prehistoric Man."

And Alice Pearce, the little lady with no chin, recreates her stage part of Betty's sniffling roommate, prancing wonderfully in that quintet, "Count on Me." Alice has a straight scene near the end and handles it effectively.

Kelly Codirected

While the knowing may complain that there are four Leonard Bernstein musical numbers missing, it should be noted that all things are relative, including the faithfulness of screen adaptions from the original. I missed "Lucky to Be Me," "Lonely Town" and two others. The additions are pleasant and the lyrics well above average.

Kelly and Standley Donen directed, with Kelly big enough a trouper to see to it he's not hogging the picture. He gives his colleagues consistent breaks and should get a chance for more directing jobs. Though let's not retire his agile figure.

Altogether, the Palace couldn't have a happier New Year.

MIDNIGHT SHOWS prevail on all the downtown screens tonight, as well as at the Ambassador.

THE WARNER and the Ambassador will be taking advantage of the Monday holiday by having a late show Sunday for a promising preview . . . The picture will be "The Hasty Heart," on which the Brothers Warner are pinning award hopes . . . In the cast of the John Patrick play about life in a British wartime army hospital are Ronald Reagan, Patricia Neal and Richard Todd, a young man who seems to be making a name for himself with his portrait of a proud, distrustful Scotsman.

THE VARIETY CLUB yesterday afternoon presented a television set to George E. Bedell, jr., a patient at the Home for Incurables since 1941, and an honorary member of the club . . . Though confined to a wheelchair for many years, Bedell has been instrumental in raising over $3000 in the recent Variety Club welfare drive . . . Secretary to General Gorgas prior to World War I, and later with the Agriculture Department, Mr. Bedell was forced by his illness to give up active work, but his insistence on working with the charity has prompted this gift from his club.

THE ARTHUR MURRAY dancers are holding forth twice nightly, 7:30 and 9:15, in the National lobby, illustrating that rhumba Rosalind Russell and Gig Young do in the current "Tell It to the Judge." . . . Sorry a couple of readers are shocked that I enjoyed such inanities, but by golly, I must confess I did.

TRAVELERS will find an old friend this weekend and for the next two at Philadelphia's Forrest Theater . . . This is Lawrence Langner's and Armina Marshall's (Mrs. L.) bundling comedy, "The Pursuit of Happiness," in musical form from Composer Morton Gould . . . The new name is "Arms and the Girl." . . . The girl is that delight of musical comedy, Nanette Fabray . . . More of a report next year!

DANNY'S O'KAYESKY: Back on the screen after sensational applause from a personal appearance tour of America and Britain, Danny Kaye opens today at the Warner in his latest comedy. It's "The Inspector General," based on Gogol's 100-year-old classic comedy, Russian, of bureaucratic government. With Danny and the legs is Barbara Bates

Morocco Will Be Scene

Arlington Writer's Mystery To Be Vehicle for Garfield

Bernard Dryer, radio writer of 2209 S. Culpeper st., Arlington, has been informed that his first mystery novel, "Port Afrique," has been purchased as a starring film vehicle for John Garfield.

Dryer

His mystery story with an African locale was published last spring by Harper's and was a midsummer selection of the Mystery Guild. The book will be reprinted in the 25-cent form this spring and also will be published in England.

Garfield and his own production company, of which Abraham Polansky and Bob Roberts are the other members, will make the film in Morocco during the spring.

The star must first complete a film for Warner Brothers, "The Breaking Point," which deals with the life of a tramp-fishing boat captain in waters off Southern California. Jerry Wald is producing this Ronald MacDougall story with Michael Curtiz as director. It will be Garfield's first film at Warner's since he left the studio which discovered him, four years ago.

Dryer, though he was in the Navy during the war, spent his overseas service assigned to the Army. It was at this post that he originally outlined his story, which also will be the background for a new—"and serious"—novel on which he is now working.

The writer spends half of each year in Arlington, the other half in Connecticut.

Another recent book has been put in motion again toward cinematic glory. This is Esther Forbes' "The Running of the Tide," for which M-G-M paid $150,000 two years ago. Miss Forbes' novel is a romance laid in nineteenth century Salem, Mass. Luther Davis is adapting the story and Charles Vidor will return to the Metro lot to direct.

Damon Runyon's short story, "The Lemon Drop Kid," originally filmed in 1934, is a likely future vehicle for Bob Hope. He'll have the part originally played by Lee Tracy.

And a story millions have read and often been promised from the screen is also on its way, "Macbeth."

A One-Night Stand

Queen Ethel to Travel 6000 Miles for ANTA

ETHEL BARRYMORE will return to the New York stage for one performance only the night of Sunday, January 29.

Queen Ethel

The Queen of the American Theater will play "The Twelve Pound Look" at the Ziegfeld Theater as the highlight of the "ANTA Album" for the benefit of the American National Theater and Academy.

Miss Barrymore's acceptance of the ANTA invitation came as a pleasant surprise to the organization, which had prayed, but had little hope, that she would make the long trip necessary from the Coast for a single performance.

"The Twelve Pound Look" is virtually Miss Barrymore's own. She acted it first in 1911 under Charles Frohman's banner as a curtain-raiser to another James M. Barrie play, "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire." Since then, she has played it virtually thousands of times, it having been her usual vehicle when she took to the vaudeville stages during variety's heyday.

Surprise Expressed

ANTA's executive secretary, Robert Breen, expressed the organization's delight and said that she would arrive from the Coast for an eight-day rehearsal period prior to the performance. Eddie McHugh, long her stage manager, will again serve in that capacity.

This third of the "ANTA Album" series is assured of a sold-out house, but news of Miss Barrymore's appearance is bound to set a record for an advance sweep.

It has been the tradition for the New York drama critics to suggest personalities and scenes for the annual benefit. This year the critical fraternity almost ran into an inner revolt.

A majority asked that a stellar company of players perform Wollcott Gibbs' satiric sketch about the critics, in the New Yorker of two years ago. Naming names, this Gibbsian aspic was, none too kind about several of the prominent aisle-sitters.

Several flatly refused to be parodied, but so insistent was the majority, notably Brooks Atkinson of the New York Times, that its' now set as one sketch of the evening. One of the evening paper boys, much-married, insists that Tyrone Power play his role.

"Floradora" Revival

Another certain highlight of ANTA'S evening will be a version of the famed "Floradora" sextette, with Celeste Holm and Carol Channing, Lorelei of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," as two of the ladies who swept the town 45 years ago.

Most of the cheaper seats for the event are already sold, but some remain at $12, $25, $50 and $100, a portion of all of which is deductible from income tax as donations to a nonprofit foundation. For information about this, write "ANTA Album," ANTA, 139 West 44th st., New York 18, N. Y.

A special showing of portions of this benefit has been discussed as a possibility for Washington later in the winter or early spring. Nothing is settled about the matter as yet.

Should a Washington performance take place, proceeds would be used to help finance the refurbishing of the Belasco in the event a lease is obtained from the Government.

Whether it does or not, Miss Barrymore's gesture in making a 6000-mile trip at the age of 70 to aid the organization is an impressive tribute to ANTA. R. L. C.

Betty and Dan in 'Call Me Mister'

By Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 30.—Betty Grable and Dan Dailey co-star in "Call Me Mister." Freddie Kohlmar has taken the music from that Broadway show and put it to a story called "CATS." About a group of civilian actresses who saw service on many fronts during the war. Some of them went to Japan after war's end. In fact, some scenes for the picture will be taken in Toyko, with General MacArthur's permission. But Betty and Dan won't make the trip. . . . Incidentally, Dan's 2-year-old son rides a horse. Wouldn't have a pony—they're too rough. . . . Signe Hasso will dye her blond hair black to play Jose Ferrer's wife in "Crisis," with Cary Grant. Story is an original by Richard Brooks, who will direct. He did the screen play for "Key Largo." . . . Clark Gable, I thought, was grown up, but now I wonder. Howard Strickling, Metro's head praise agent, flew to Honolulu to meet the boat and will stay for part of the honeymoon. Howard did the same service for Louis B. Mayer.

Betty

GOLDEN EGG—Bob Hope is No. 1 on Fame's poll of the biggest money makers of the year. Yep, "Paleface" and "Sorrowful Jones" really paid off. Bob won't start another picture until April. Meanwhile he's asking for a new studio deal. He does two pictures a year for Paramount, and one for himself; but he'd like the deal Bing Crosby's got—an interest in every picture he makes . . . Since his trip to Alaska, Bob's started a crusade to get the fliers and their families who live up there the best of everything. Better housing, better living conditions, better everything. It was so cold—42 below—that Bob and his family had to board the plane inside the hangar. His kids had a great time skating and bob-sledding. Said Bob, "I wouldn't have missed it for anything" . . . Bob Ryan wants to make a sequel to "The Setup." In fact, he's written his own story line depicting the further adventures of the broken down prize fighter he played so well in the original . . . Bill Dozier's talking to Olivia De Haviland about playing in the remake of "Craig's Wife." Pardon me, it's now called "The Lady of the House" . . . I don't believe the story that Cornel Wilde and Liz Scott are singing hearts and flowers to each other, except perhaps as a joke . . . Jack Barrymore, jr., is smart turning down the play "Sandy Point." Says he won't play Broadway until he's 21. He shouldn't try the main stem until he's learned his job—acting . . . When we're talking about best bets for 1949, let's mention Mark Robson, who in one year directed "Champion," "Home of the Brave" and "My Foolish Heart."

DATA ON D. O. S.—David Selznick says Gregory Peck will do a picture for him abroad, as soon as he finishes one for Warners. David Edmund Gwenn if he ever thought of returning to London. He said: "No. The house in which I lived there for 30 years was destroyed in the blitz, and most of my cherished possessions went with it. I have no reason to return, except maybe for a picture now and again." . . . Esther Williams and Ben Gage are adding a rumpus room to their Trails Restaurant.

Coast Guard Head, Others, Are Retiring

The commandant of the Coast Guard and the curator of archeology at the National Museum are among those retiring from Government service today.

Admiral Joseph F. Farley, 60, will relinquish his command to his assistant commandant, Rear Admiral Merlin O'Neill, who will be promoted to vice admiral.

Admiral Farley became head of the Coast Guard on January 1, 1946, as the service was preparing to return to the Treasury Department from its wartime duty with the Navy.

Praised by Secretary Snyder

"The Government is Admiral Farley's debtor, and so is the country, for the almost two score years of outstanding Coast Guard service he has to his credit," said Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, at a luncheon honoring the outgoing commandant yesterday.

A native of Oxford, Ohio, Admiral Farley graduated from the Coast Guard Academy in 1912. In World War I, he was engaged in convoy and escort duty out of Gibraltar.

Subsequently he served as the Coast Guard's chief communications officer and represented the United States at several international communications conferences.

To Move to North Carolina

Commissioned a rear admiral in 1943, Admiral Farley became chief operations officer of the Coast Guard. A year later he was named chief personnel officer, a post he held until his promotion to commandant. He holds the Victory Medal, the American Defense Service Medal, and the Legion of Merit.

The Admiral and Mrs. Farley will retire to Wilmington, N. C., where he intends to indulge his favorite hobbies of hunting and fishing. The Farleys have two married daughters.

The new commandant, Admiral O'Neill, took part in amphibious invasions in both the European and Pacific theaters in the recent war as skipper of the USS Leonard Wood.

Assistant commandant since early 1946, Admiral O'Neill is married and has two daughters. He lives at the Westchester Apartments, 4000 Cathedral ave. nw.

Grandmother Dies in Fire Set by Boy

The Washington Post
PERRY GREEN
Sheds tears

A 75-year-old grandmother was fatally burned yesterday as the result of a fire which police said was set by her 5-year-old grandson, after she scolded him.

The victim is Mrs. Deder Suber, 2513 I st. nw.

Police, who talked briefly to the grandmother, after the fire at 10 a. m. said she told this story:

She reprimanded the boy, Perry Green, for a fault which police were unable to determine. He went into the front bedroom of the second-floor apartment and with matches, set the bed afire. When she attempted to extinguish it, her clothing caught fire.

She was taken to Emergency Hospital where authorities said she suffered third-degree burns over most of her body and she died at 7:10 p. m.

Mother of the boy is Mrs. Ethel Kinard, who, according to police, was at work at the time.

Ex-Gangster Slays Wife 'By Mistake'

Chicago, Dec. 30. (U.P.)—A prohibition era gangster, startled from an uneasy sleep, shot his wife to death today in the asserted belief she was a former henchman seeking revnge.

Julius (Babe) Jones, 52, told police he has lived in fear of his life since hearing that members of his old gang soon might be released from prison, where his testimony as a "stool pigeon" sent them in the kidnaping of a big-time gambler.

Last night he went to bed with an automatic beneath his pillow. Suddenly, he said, there was a noise at the door and he awakened with a start. He said he "came up shooting," firing six shots.

His wife, Grace, 47, slumped to the floor of their one-room apartment. John Fitzgerald, 48, a family friend, was wounded superficially. Jones himself called police.

Two hours later Jones was told his wife had died. He wept, "She was the best pal I ever had."

Josh Lee Reappointed

Josh Lee, former Democratic senator from Oklahoma, was reappointed yesterday for a new six-year term as a member of the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Claims Reviewer Walter

A career of nearly 54 years of Government service will end today for Clarence J. Walter, 70, a claims reviewer in the retirement division of the Civil Service Commission.

Fellow employes yesterday gave Walter a gold pocket watch and a leather-bound book of congratulations, pictures and other memorabilia.

A District native, Walter started in the Government in 1896 as a messenger in the old Pension Bureau. He is married, has two sons and lives at the Chastleton Hotel, 1701 16th st. nw.

Bureau Section Chief

Ralph E. Gould, 63, of 114 Philadelphia ave., Takoma Park, Md., leaves the Bureau of Standards today after 26 years as chief of the time section in the meteorology division.

Under his direction, the bureau substituted newer and more accurate electronic methods of computing time for the old mechanical time-measuring instruments. He joined the bureau 31 years ago.

Born in Boston, Mass., and educated at Tufts College, Gould will devote his time to his post as secretary of the Horological Institute of America. He is married and has two married children.

Harry Fox, Section Chief

Harry A. Fox, 70, chief of the coin section of the Cashier's Office, Office of the United States Treasurer, will retire today from a Government career which began in May, 1900.

Fox began as an apprentice in the Geological Survey, spent two years with the Weather Bureau and has been in the Treasurer's Office since 1904. He lives at 58 V st. nw.

Others Retiring

The Interstate Commerce Commission announced the retirement of seven of its employes, effective today. They are:

Mrs. Bathsheba M. MacLeod, 69, a clerk in the Bureau of Transport Economics and Statistics who lives at 1229 12th st. nw.

Eugene H. Waters, 68, an examiner in the Bureau of Formal Cases, who lives at Germantown, Md.

G. Heard Mattingly, 62, a hearing examiner in the Bureau of Formal Cases, who lives at 16 Rosemary st., Chevy Chase, Md.

Calvin I. Kephart, 66, examiner in the Bureau of Motor Carriers, who lives at 3016 N. 5th st., Arlington.

Charles F. Brown, 69, chief of section, Bureau of Formal Cases, who lives at 1606 A st. ne.

Clarence A. Bernhard, 65, hearing examiner in the Bureau of Finance, who lives in Rockville, Md.

PBA Official Retiring

Melvin C. Russell, assistant chief of the Public Buildings Administration's space use and leasing division, will retire today after 32 years of Government service.

Assigned to provide space for the mushrooming war agencies during the emergency, the 57-year-old Savannah, Ga., native said his service with the Seventy-ninth Division in World War I was "nothing" compared to the job of leasing seven million square feet of building space.

He and his wife will leave their

Outwitting Your Years

Happiness Brings You Health—and Vice Versa

By Clarence William Lieb, M. D.

Dr. Leib, a graduate of Harvard Medical School in 1914, was active in medical research for many years. After 1930 his practice was confined to geriatrics, the branch of medicine concerned with old age. He is now retired. This is a condensation in six chapters of Dr. Leib's book, "Outwitting Your Years," published by Prentice-Hall, Inc.

Chapter Six

SO NOW where are we? Not in despair, I trust, about this business of growing old.

As an old-line physician who has spent most of his adult life trying to rid people of their physical disabilities, I know that there can be no happiness without health.

As a confirmed believer in the modern science of psychosomatic medicine, I know that there can be no health without happiness.

Old Still Rule

SUSTAINED by these truths, which I believe to be self-evident, I want to show, not by theories but by facts, how this dual goal can be reached, how, in fact, it is being reached by thousands of happy, healthy oldsters. For example:

The old, not the young, still rule the world.

The good no longer die young.

The deadliest disease to which man is heir is fear.

All fear in older persons, even the fear of loss of sexual potency, is evil, and, like other devils, can be cast out.

Pessimism, living in the past, and boredom can be cured by keeping the mind young.

Even soul sickness yields to character.

The gap between the generations can be bridged.

Age has innumerable advantages over youth.

Retirement to idleness because of age is as unnecessary as it is unwise.

If some crackpot system of compulsory retirement forces us to give up our old jobs, we can get new ones.

In choosing new jobs, we have the priceless opportunity of choosing a job we want to do.

Old or new hobbies can be made to pay in money for our bank accounts or service to the community.

At last, we are old enough to appreciate literature, music and art, and, if we have part-time leisure, we have the chance to enjoy them.

We can assure ourselves a healthy old age by adopting the sensible policy of yearly or semi-yearly medical audits.

Although there is no such thing as rejuvenation, there is reactivation, and all can achieve it.

The dangers involved in change of life in both women and men are temporary and can be minimized or eliminated by sound medical treatment.

No 'Diseases of Age'

THERE are no diseases of old age, but simply diseases to which older people are sometimes subject, for most of which medical science now has effective remedies.

Hardening of the arteries is a natural process that can be held in check. High blood pressure is less important than most people think. Diabetes, if arriving late in life, is seldom a serious ailment.

Cancer, although second to heart disease in the number of its victims, occurs in only a small fraction of the population, and, although science has not yet found a cure for it, it has found remarkable new methods of checking its spread and alleviating its pain.

The other pain diseases, notably arthritis and neuritis, are seldom fatal. Like cancer, they are yielding to the checking and alleviating processes discovered by modern medical research.

Insomnia, which plagues so many older people, can be cured without resorting to narcotics.

Although hair still turns gray or disappears, eyes with failing vision see, and deaf ears hear, and dentures are so efficient that oldsters often eat far more than they should.

There are attractive and satisfying diets, which, if adhered to with reasonable faithfulness, promote longevity.

There are no specific diets but definite dietary principles especially adapted to brainworkers.

There are diets for the obese which will shorten their waistline and lengthen their years.

Needs Religion

THERE are many healthful sports and amusements in which even the very old can safely indulge.

Even if participation in competitive sports is no longer possible or wise, there are still those twin delights of outdoor living, fishing and the study of the starry heavens.

And there is that other "that," infinitely bigger than any of them.

I have referred to it several times in these pages, and thought of it even more frequently in the writing of them. I would have written much more about it if I had known how to do so.

But a man's own religion is such a personal thing that it is difficult for a layman to set forth in formal phrases the convictions that lie deepest in his mind and his heart. Man in the presence of his Maker finds himself strangely inarticulate.

However, in closing, I should be lacking in gratitude for what my religion has meant to me and in my duty to my readers if I did not state what I profoundly believe—the supreme alchemy in the process of outwitting your years is belief in God.

Baltimore Hits New Airport For D. C. in Va.

Baltimore, Dec. 30 (AP).—Mayor D'Alesandro today asked President Truman to reject a proposal for a major airport in Virginia to relieve Washington air traffic.

He said the Friendship International Airport, about 10 miles from Baltimore and 30 from Washington, would fit the bill nicely.

[It is understood that the Civil Aeronautics Administration has been considering construction of an airport in Fairfax County, Va. —Editor's Note.]

In a wire to the White House, D'Alesandro said in part:

"The city of Baltimore will open Friendship International Airport next summer.

"This 3200-acre facility has been developed with the encouragement and assistance of the Federal Government to serve the growing air traffic in the Washington, Baltimore, Annapolis region.

"With the completion of the Washington-Baltimore Expressway is will be only 30 minutes from downtown Washington and 15 minutes from downtown Baltimore.

"The building of an additional Federal airport in Virginia would at best only duplicate this facility at an estimated cost of approximately 20 million dollars.

Our New Year's Eve

Each time another year must end . . . My darling wife and I . . . Discuss the fortunes of the months . . . That now have drifted by . . . We do not go to parties and . . . We do not have our own . . . But we enjoy the New Year's Eve . . . Together and alone . . . We count the many blessings that . . . Have multiplied our wealth . . . Especially our children . . . Their happiness and health . . . We figure out the future on . . . The basis of today . . . And plan to do the best we can . . . For progress and for play . . . We give our gratitude to God . . . And as the New Year starts . . . We kiss each other and renew . . . The promise in our hearts.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

You Might as Well Quit Stalling and Buy a Set Now, Dad

One of the radio industry's smartest experts says privately that it will be at least three years before the public can buy color television receivers, and that five years would be a safer guess.

CONFUSING, ISN'T IT?

Pauline Friedland of 2436 Tunlaw rd. reports an amusing conversation between a small boy and his mother, in the Dagwood Restaurant recently.

"Mother," asked the boy, "what does l-i-t-t-e-r spell?"

"That spells 'litter,' dear," replied the mother. "When a dog has a lot of puppies, that's a litter."

The lad studied the sign just outside the restaurant window for a while longer, and then piped back with:

"Then why does the sign say: 'Obey the Law; Do Not Litter the Streets'?"

GIVE-AWAYS

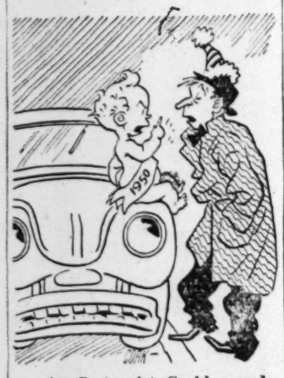
"Four well-behaved black kittens, 10 weeks old; will deliver in Arlington or Northwest Washington." (Jackson 4-1590.)

AND MANY OF THEM

The laws which prohibit public drinking past midnight this New Year's Eve will put a damper on many a celebration.

But they may also serve to save a life or two. Especially among motorists.

It has been demonstrated time and time again that driving while drunk is a mighty poor way to greet the New Year. Too many motorists who protest "Lemme alone, I'm shober I tell ya," never live to see what January 2 will bring.



As Cartoonist Coakley and I join in wishing you a happy New Year, we remind you that if you're drinking tonight—don't drive.

It's tough enough to keep out of trouble when you're cold sober. By way of illustration, consider this all-too-true incident:

A pace from the curb, the old man waits in the night for a temporary break in the stream of auto headlights. But the dismal squish of tires against wet pavement seems never-ending.

He takes a hitch in the bag of groceries he's bringing home, and patiently waits his chance. Then, the path seems clear, and he starts across.

From the other direction comes an unseen car. A horn, a scream, a skid, a thud—and it's all over. The bag of groceries explodes into a shower of flying glass. The old man's false teeth clatter to the wet pavement. Windows are thrown up; people come running.

In the glare of the steaming headlights lies the broken form of the old man, an arm and a leg folded beneath his inert body in a grotesquely awkward position.

"Don't touch him," somebody says . . . "Call the police" . . . "You can't let him lay there in the rain" . . . "Here, let me fold up my coat and put it under his head" . . . "You'd better cover him up. He's in a state of shock" . . . "Who did it?" . . . "Is he dead?" . . . "Did they call the cops?"

Two men who appear to know something about first aid take charge. But it seems hours until the police arrive, and then the ambulance. (Actually, the first cruiser was on the scene in less than 3 minutes.)

The intern works rapidly, while policemen light flares and untangle traffic. The crowd continues to grow in spite of the rain.

"C'mon, let's get going or we'll be late. It's just some old guy got hit by a car." . . . "We pleaded with them for a light, but they said we didn't need one because nobody's been killed here yet." . . . "All right, folks, break it up and let this ambulance out of here."

The next day, his name wasn't even in the papers. Just another statistic, lost in a hurrying city that placidly accepts death and injury as the price of "saving" a few seconds.

Tomorrow the statistic may be you, or maybe me. It depends on which one of us is in the bigger rush.

Personally, I think I'm going to slow down. I'd rather not be a statistic hurrying someplace to happen.

SECOND THOUGHTS ON CHRISTMAS

Now Christmas time has passed again . . . And bills are pouring in . . . The way some people spend their dough . . . It sometimes seems a-sin . . . But when I see the happy smiles . . . On faces all around . . . It makes me feel I could be wrong . . . And the Christmas spirit sound.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—President Truman soon will announce the creation of a National Committee for Water Conservation, to study the water-shortages throughout the country. The problem is now acute in New York and New Jersey. Then convening members of the American Association for the Advancement of Science will devote the Friday evening session to the discussion of one book, the Kinsey Report. The last book to receive such treatment from these scientist swas Darwin's Origin of Species. . . . New York's top producers now meet once every two weeks to discuss ways of reducing show-production costs. Leland Hayward, producer of "South Pacific," "Mr. Roberts" and "Rat Race," heads the group.

Mrs. Perle Mesta, who was Washington's foremost party-giver, gave a Christmas party for 500 orphans at her home in Luxembourg. "It was a nice party," she reported. "We pretended they were all Congressmen and Senators" . . . When Helena Braun substituted for Helen Traubel, and Regina Resnick switched roles at the Metropolitan Opera last week, the morning papers with the front-page stories about them were delivered to the singers as soon as they stepped off into the wings. . . . An interviewer who visited Bob Hope for a story on "The Great Lover" saw dozens of suits in his dressing-room. She asked him: "What do you do with your old clothes?" Hope replied: "I have them cleaned."

William A. Brady, the venerable producer, left his home for the first time in years to witness a dress rehearsal of "The Velvet Glove," in which his wife, Grace George, is starred and in which his granddaughter, Barbara Brady, makes her debut . . . Kenn Rogers, the New Yorker whose laundromat in Vienna became a political issue in Austria, will testify next month before a Senate committee investigating U. S. business prospects abroad. A representative of Joyva Halvah brought Jimmy Durante a bust of the comedian, made of halvah. "What did I do to deserve this?" Durante beamed—and then at it.

The Gallup Poll

58% of U. S. Adults 'Bend An Elbow'

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 30.—The champagne, whisky, gin, rum, wine and beer will flow New Year's Eve for 6 out of every 10 adults throughout the country if everybody who customarily drinks alcoholic beverages bends the elbow in celebration of the New Year.

Fifty-eight percent of American adults drink, while 42 percent say they are total abstainers. Thats revealed in a Nation-wide survey conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion on the following question:

"Do you ever have occasion to use any alcoholic beverages—such as liquor, wine or beer—or are you a total abstainer?"

The results:

Drinkers	58%
Abstainers	42

The survey found a sharp difference in drinking habits between men and women. Also a smaller proportion of abstainers was found among younger people—those under 30—than among older people.

Here are the results by sex and by age:

	Drinkers	Abstainers
By Sex
Men	66%	34%
Women	49	51
By Age
21-29 years	66	34
30-49 years	61	39
50 and over	47	53

Attitudes toward national prohibition almost exactly parallel drinking.

The vote against a return to Nation-wide prohibition totals 55 percent of the sample questioned, as compared to 58 percent who drink.

Before being questioned about his drinking habits, each person was asked:

"If the question of national prohibition should come up again, would you vote wet or dry?"

The results:

Wet	55%
Dry	33
No opinion	12

Local option elections have re-established prohibition on a local basis in many communities since the national dry law was repealed in 1934. It should be borne in mind that today's survey deals only with countrywide sentiment toward a return to national prohibition.

The survey on drinking habits was conducted among a cross section of the Nation's 94 million adults by the Institute's new "Time-Place" sampling method, which utilizes area sampling techniques.

THE LONGER I PUT THIS OFF, THE HARDER IT IS TO START!...BUT..
My dear Drum:
When people of our age consider marriage, we are usually looking for security. Yet we may end up by losing it! Old humans, like old trees, can suffer cruelly when transplanted, Drum.
We old have habits comfortable and firmly rooted. These are part of our feeling of security — And trying to destroy them can leave deep emotional scars.
Please, I'm not saying elderly couples should never marry. Thousands have found that the sunset is most beautiful when the view is shared with a good companion. But might it not become a Latter thing for an active man — seeing his world through the eyes of an old woman?
If I had to give my final answer today, I'm afraid it would be no. But no is such a cruel, cold word, Drum — so let's pretend you never asked me a question that called for such an answer —
With my deepest affection and admiration.

Affidavits Reveal Lewis Tactics

By Drew Pearson

John L. Lewis has announced with considerable fanfare the new contracts signed by independent coal mines and his union. But he has not announced—in fact, doesn't want known—the tactics used to get these small companies to sign new contracts.

Lewis

In at least two cases, Lewis closed down mines completely, not even permitting them a 3-day week, because they refused his terms. The mines in question are the Cove Fork Coal Co. and the famous Elkhorn Coal Co., both in Pike County, Ky. A sworn affidavit by Jack Picklesimer and Fon M. Johnson, operators of the mines, states:

"We were called to attend a meeting at the United Mine Workers headquarters of the truck mine operators on December 2, 1949, at 6 o'clock. We attended, and Sam Caddy, president of United Mine Workers, District 30, proposed that we sign a contract with the mine workers which was to extend to September 1, 1951.

"A part of the terms were disclosed to us. Included in the terms about which we were told was a 95-cents-per-day increase in wages, a 15-cents-per-ton increase in the welfare fund payments, and a broadening and alteration of the 'willing and able' clause which we were told was to enable the mine workers to control the production of the various mines in the country to prevent an overproduction of coal."

Sam Caddy, Lewis's representative, said in substance, according to the affidavit, "that we would be able to operate five days a week and get our own price for the coal, as the other mines would not produce sufficient coal to meet the demand."

The most amazing part of the negotiations, however, was that the mine operators were not shown a copy of the proposed contract, but were expected to go to Washington and sign any contract presented to them there.

Two small operators refused to be bulldozed and, as a result, their mines were closed down completely. They were not even permitted to work a three-day week as were other coal mines throughout the country.

Polluted Water

New York's water shortage may be a blessing in disguise by focusing attention on a long-standing menace to the drinking water of other parts of the Nation.

Every year Congress votes hundreds of millions of "pork barrel" funds for flood control and river-and-harbor development, but has been extremely tight-fisted in providing money to purify the water that goes into our homes from these same rivers.

The problem is not so great in the Great Lakes area, where the lake water requires relatively little treatment for contamination. However, most of the United States depends upon river water for drinking, and there is a glaring lack of adequate facilities for cleansing it of human sewage and industrial waste.

There are approximately 150 million people in the United States. Yet the pollution of our waterways is equivalent to the sewage of 200 million people—because half the pollution is caused by industrial waste. This has doubled in post-war years.

To prevent a repetition of the New York water crisis in other parts of the country Congress and the State legislatures are going to be required to face the water-pollution problem instead of ducking it. This means that 10,500 new waterworks plants may be needed to chemically treat river waters for sewage and industrial waste, according to the United States Public Health Service. A total of between seven billion dollars and 10 billion dollars of joint Federal and State funds will be needed to safeguard the Nation's drinking water.

In Liquor Business

The House Armed Services Committee is considering a probe of Army-Navy officer clubs which have been selling whisky against the law.

Under an act of Congress (1901) still in effect, the sale or purchase of intoxicants on a military establishment is strictly forbidden. In October, 1947, General Eisenhower, then Chief of Staff, issued an order clarifying this law and ruling that the sale of package liquor was taboo in officers' clubs as well as in Army PX's.

Despite this restriction, however, Army officers at Fort Benning, Ga., not only have been selling whisky and other intoxicants by the bottle, but have actually been advertising such sales in case and half-case lots.

Congressmen have received complaints that one officer at Benning received a shipment of 164 cases of wines and liquors last July, which he later sold to officer friends.

The House Armed Services Committee also has received complaints that package liquor is being sold indirectly to civilians at the naval gun factory in Washington, Andrews Field in nearby Maryland, Stewart Field (near West Point), Fort Hamilton (New York), Westover Field (Massachusetts) and other installations.

Devaluation Flops

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder has sent the White House a report on British devaluation which paints anything but a rosy picture for the future. It indicates that Britain will need a two-billion-dollar loan from the United States if she is to keep her economy above water.

Snyder, who originally sold the British on devaluation, had in mind that the cheaper pound would give them a chance to invade the American market. But it has not worked out that way.

One difficulty is that British businessmen have found the American market too tough, too competitive, and too costly. As a result they are concentrating their export efforts in the sterling area—the British dominions, the Middle East and Africa—where they are already established. However, this gives them no new dollars, and the source of dollars—which the British had so desperately hoped for from devaluation—is rapidly drying up.

The British government is working hard on the problem of cracking the American market, but British businessmen are not.

THIS NEW YEAR'S, why not try something different for your guests? By now, they must be tired of ham and turkey, so put on your bonnet this morning and come down to Center Market City and investigate all the fascinating foods we have for this weekend's entertaining.

CHEESES of all varieties are to be found under our roof. Perhaps you might like to try Kasseri cheese from Greece. Then take a trip to Variety Sales Co., near the back entrance of the Market. Or how about Bleu cheese for spreads, imported and domestic Swiss cheese, New York State sharp cheese, Garganzola cheese from Italy, Provolone from Italy, and Sap Sago cheese from Switzerland. You can find the former at such stands as Lamb's and Sack's, and the latter at Harry Angelico's.

KASSERI is a sharp Greek cheese, and Kefalotiri or Mezithra are other excellent Greek cheeses you can find at Variety Sales Co. Feta is a very good white cheese, excellent in salads, that you can also find at this stand.

Calamata olives are also good ideas for New Year's parties. Angelico's Italian olives are in the same class.

MIKE KESSLER, who presides over stand No. 139, has all of the liquid refreshments you'll need for your parties. You'll find everything here from Scotch and Bourbon to Champagne and Brandy. And it's so convenient . . . you can shop for your drinks while shopping for your buffet.

AND DO LET us tell you about the potato chips you'll find at Helen Bechtel's stand. Now, maybe you think a potato chip is just a potato chip, but there's all the difference in the world, as you will see when you sample these.

These exceptional potato chips are made in Hanover, Pa., and they're large, non-greasy, and uniform in color. And that's where the difference comes in. You'll be thankful for these when you start cleaning up from parties, and find that you don't have greasy marks, crumbs, and leftovers lying around. Greasy, burnt small potato chips usually cause those troubles. That's why most smart hostesses order theirs from the Bechtel stand.

NOW, if you do want to serve ham, and many hostesses do, why not get one of Weigert's ready-prepared hams? We had one for Christmas, and they can't be improved upon. They slice beautifully, and their taste is out of this world. You can find these wonderful hams at Fred Weigert's stand.
